MME. STEINHEIL IS ACQUITTED BY JURY

Tragic Widow of France Freed on Charge of Murdering Her Artist Husband.

Special Cable to Boston American.
By VANCE THOMPSON.

PARIS, Sunday morning, Nov. 14.—Mme. Marguerite Steinheil, the "tragic widow," was acquitted late this morning by a jury of the charge of murdering her husband, Adolphe Steinheil, the painter, the second charge of slaying her step-mother, Mme. Japy, having been dropped by the government.

The jury brought in its verdict shortly before 3 o'clock, after a session of more than two hours. The jurors ceased their deliberations three times to get explanations from the president of the court and this was taken as an indication that on the first ballot the majority probably was for conviction.

The rendering of the verdict was fraught with dramatic features. Every one in the court room had been keyed up to a high pitch of nervous tension because of the delay. As the jury entered the court room the expression of relief on the faces of several of its members conveyed the instant impression that the verdict was acquittal.

Dramatic Scene in Court.

In intense silence the judges and attorneys returned to the court room and took their places. Only Mme. Steinheil remained to make the picture complete, and every eye in the room was turned toward the door from whence the prisoner was expected to enter, like the star in some great drama. But the door remained closed. With grave face, M. de Valles, president of the court, addressed the jury:

"Have you reached a verdict?"

The foreman stood up and said slowly and distinctly:

"On our conscience we answer an acquittal."

The words were scarcely uttered by

COAL WORKERS DIE IN FIERY FURNACE AS GAS EXPLODES

SPRING VALLEY, Ill., Nov. 13.—Four hundred and seventy-two men, according to the most reliable estimates obtainable here to-night, went to their death in the frightful disaster at the mine of the St. Paul Coke Company at Cherry, four miles from this place, to-day.

Twenty-four men escaped from the burning mine.

One rescue party of twelve men perished. The men knew they were venturing into the very jaws of death. They did not flinch. As they were nearing the top of the shaft on their return trip a sheet of flame enveloped them. They were burned to death almost in an instant.

Four hundred and sixty men are entombed in the fiery furnace hundreds of feet below the surface of the ground.

Every shaft, the only possible means of exit, has been hermetically sealed.

Imprisoned In Mine.

The imprisoned miners—those who did not die by fire—will be suffocated in the bowels of the earth.

The fire will burn for weeks and perhaps months. Rescue is out of the question. The men—if any be alive—are penned in a furnace of flames.

The disaster at the Cherry mine, a new mine, and one supposed to have been fitted with the most modern appliances to prevent just such a disaster as this, is the worst in the history of coal mining in the State of Illinois.

The fire spread with amazing rapidity, but according to reports received here the men working in the mine would have at least been given a fighting chance for their lives had it not been for the officials of the mine and the mine bosses.

The fire, according to reports, was discovered in the mule barn on the second level of the mine at one o'clock this afternoon. The mule barn stood about midway between the "down shaft" and the "escape shaft."

The fire was reported to the officials of the company and the mine bosses. Evidently they did not consider the situation a dangerous one. No attempt was made to sound the alarm for the hundred of men in the lower level of the mine. They were in ignorance of their deadly peril.

The fire spread rapidly. At 3 o'clock, two hours later, the mine bosses saw the danger. They caused a general alarm to be sounded. It was too late. The fire was beyond control and the death knell of the hundreds of men nothing in drifts and levels had already sounded.

The Cherry mine is about 500 feet deep. It has three veins or levels in which work was being carried on to-day. Comparatively few men were at work in the first level—the one nearest the surface. The great majority of the men were in the second and third levels.

Families Gather at Shaft.

A large percentage of the men who have gone to their death in the mine were married. Their wives and their children have crowded about the shaft entrances wailing and crying.

Many of the women have sought to throw themselves down the shaft and into the seething furnace of flame far below.

The widows and the fatherless, the bread-winners of the family, snatched away from them almost in an instant, are the most pathetic sights in the town of mourning to-night.

Dr. Howe of Cherry is enrolled to-night on the list of heroes. He, scorning danger, thinking only of the unfortunates in the mine, made four trips down the shaft to the first level. He helped to bring several men to the surface.

John Reid, a Spring Valley miner, heard the alarm and started for the top by the escape shaft. Just after passing the second level he came upon a young boy who, like himself, was struggling to reach the open air. The young fellow was almost gone. His vitality was exhausted. He was about ready to let go.

"Hold on a second, I'll get you!" shouted Reid. The boy held on. Reid came through the shaft nearly exhausted himself, but with the boy in one arm. He had with his great strength held the boy in one arm while he climbed up the ladder.

At 8 o'clock to-night the order was reluctantly given to seal both the main shaft and the escape shaft. With the issuing of this order the officers of the mine abandoned all hopes of saving any of their imprisoned employes. The fire had gone beyond control. It would have been a useless risk of life to attempt to send down rescuing parties. No man could have lived in the shafts or levels even if men could have been found ready to go below.

Ten bodies were recovered close to the

YALE OUTCLASSES PRINCETON IN A 17 TO 0 WIN

BY C. E. VAN LOAN.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 13.—By the score of 17 to 0, the husky sons of old Eli Yale wiped up the gridiron with the mangled remains of the Princeton Tiger to-day. When the last whistle blew and the thousands of crazy Derbyites hopped down into Yale field to begin their annual walk-around and serpentine dance, they had before them the celebration of the most complete whipping that Yale has given Princeton in fourteen years.

Yale's showing this afternoon completely justifies the faith of those who had given three and four to one on their chances. The Princeton men were not only outplayed, but outclassed. There was scarcely a man on the Princeton team of whom it can be said that he outplayed his opponent on the other side of the line. Yale's backs ripped and tore through the Tiger line almost at will. When it came to the kicking part of the programme, Captain Ted Coy loomed up as the tall Yale more of the contest, his punts usually showing a marked gain on the exchanges.

By the way, speaking of water on the knee, if Coy showed the symptoms of that malady this afternoon, it behooves John Harvard to water some of his fine young stock before next Saturday's game. Coy kicked and dived and plunged and tore through to-day's game without the sign of a limp and when he put his head down and hit the line it was all over but counting up the yards.

Yale's Ends Are Stars.

The Yale ends starred themselves throughout this afternoon. The way Kilpatrick tore down the field after Coy's long punts was marvelous to behold. Time after time he was waiting right beside little Bergin as he put up his hands for the ball. Whenever Kilpatrick was a bit late he made up for it with a fine flying tackle which dropped the Princeton man some yards back of his tracks. With the Yale line holding, the backs tearing big foot holes in the opposition line and the ends dashing all over the field after the punts, there was never a chance for Princeton after the first ten minutes of the game. Though the Tigers took an occasional brace and plunged up the line, it was only a dash in the pan, as was

CRIMSON WEIGHT OVERCOMES GREEN

Giants in a Stubborn Battle for the First Half, but in the Second Cambridge Takes Hanover's Measure and Smashes its Way to Hard-earned Victory.

Thirty-five Thousand Delirious Spectators See Old Gridiron Enemies in the Most Sensational Conflict Witnessed Within Stadium.

By L. R. MURDOCK.

OH BE JOYFUL! Harvard won won a splendid game in a clean cut gentlemanly manner in which the best there is to foot ball was seen to the best advantage. The score was 12 to 3. But Dartmouth has no reason to feel humiliated. The Dartmouth boys played splendidly. Harvard has the better team—that is all.

And while Harvard was rolling up the great score Yale and Princeton were in a struggle in New Haven and Yale won 17 to 0. Those figures will give you a line on the great game next Saturday when Harvard and Yale will meet in the most tremendous battle of the year.

It was by sheer weight and strength Harvard crushed the rival. The boys from Hanover put up a battle that won the cheers and the admiration of even the Harvard crowd. The brilliant and sensational struggle kept 35,000 spectators in a state of keen excitement until the final whistle blew.

It was such a gruelling smashing fierce game that Capt. Fish of Harvard was knocked groggy in the second half and was withdrawn by the coaches from the lineup as a matter of precaution. His injuries, however, were not at all serious, and he will play in the big game with Yale next Saturday.

Won in the Second Half.

Harvard pulled the game out of the fire with a touchdown after a muffed punt early in the second half. Dartmouth might have tied it with a field goal in the middle of the half, but the Hanover generals decided to try straight football for a touchdown and missed. This strategic move led indirectly to a second Harvard touchdown. At the very end, Dartmouth did report to the field goal, and Tobin, the big Dartmouth guard, was the man who gave the defeated Dartmouth lads something for comfort.

The entire first half was one of the cleanest exhibitions of football this year, and neither side could score. The second half abounded in sensational plays.

It was a magnificent crowd that saw the struggle. Nearly every seat in the mammoth arena was taken. The great tiers of concrete seats were not sufficient. Around the field, at the bottom of the huge "horseshoe," were tiers of wooden seats, and at the north end of the field was a large wooden stand that itself contained 8,000 spectators.

As usual, when Dartmouth plays at Cambridge, it was a holiday. Before noon, even, all the roads leading to the Stadium were choked with automobiles, trolley cars and other vehicles and a constant procession of people afoot. They streamed into the field through a multitude of entrances, and overflowed the brink of the immense concrete bowl like so many flies into a dish of molasses. Before long, the specks of humanity that at first dotted the stands crimsoned the one side and made the other side a brilliant field of green.

Spectators Arrive After Game Starts.

When, at 2 o'clock, the two elevens were ready for battle the crowd had not yet ceased arriving. The Boston & Albany railroad, running some belated trains into Allston, a mile away, dumped thousands of gaily dressed people long after it looked as if there were not room for one more in the amphitheatre. After the game was on they were still pouring into the Stadium.

Inside there were more than enough people to populate a good-sized

TAFT DIRECTING WAR AGAINST SUGAR TRUST

Fight to Free Nation of Leeching Lobby Involves Scandal of Republican Machine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Nothing can break down the most vigorous prosecution that the Federal Government can institute against the Sugar Trust.

If necessary, the Tobacco Trust will be brought into the controversy, and its prosecution will be as vigorous as that which is to be waged against the Sugar Trust.

Attorney-General Wickersham and Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh held a two hours' conference on the subject to-day. Each had been with President Taft and had talked the matter over with him. Secretary MacVeagh knew the conditions regarding customs frauds as told by Collector Loeb of New York and Prosecutor Stimson. Mr. Wickersham had the legal end of the game.

The treasury officials are now moving against the tobacco trust. There is said to be a community of political interests between the two great trusts that have long controlled legislation, both national and state.

Theft of Papers No Secret.

The theft of incriminating papers from Richard Parr, special sugar trust inspector, is not news to the Treasury department. It was reported nearly two years ago.

Behind the scenes the fight the contest to rid the national administration of the leeches of the sugar and the tobacco trusts is a bigger fight than the Republican national machine has entered upon. It involves political machines in critical Republican States.

Speaker Cannon has begun his fight. Hiram Parsons of New York has said that he is to be an investigation of the deal in Congress last Winter, whereby Cannon and his rules triumphed by the assistance of Democratic votes. Cannon threatened reprisals. With the death of Senator Pat McCarren the sugar trust legislation lobby lost its leader. Speaker Cannon is said to have paid his debts. There is no one left to tell the details, McCarren met Cannon alone.

Parsons "Preached" on Cannon.

It is said here in political circles that because of the fight on Speaker Cannon, and the breach of faith by Parsons, son of John E. Parsons, chief counsel for the sugar trust, in "preaching" on Cannon, the sugar trust is to be thrown overboard by the Republican organization. If it is necessary to save Cannon, the tobacco trust, also charged with customs frauds, is to be unloaded by the Republican machine.

SCIENTISTS TO SEE PEASANT MEDIUM

Signora Eusapia Palladino, who is giving New York believers in spiritualism sittings at $250 each, is to be subjected to a hard test when a committee of eighteen American scientists attend her seance.

Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard, head of the department of Psychology, will be upon this committee.

"It is true that I have agreed to be present with other scientific men at a seance by Palladino," said Professor Munsterberg to a Sunday American reporter. "I do not know anything about this woman but as I am interested in such affairs and she is reported to be unusual, I should like to see what she can psy-do."

This peasant woman from Neappears, to be possessed by spirits of gall, elegance and refinement. She has made a sensation abroad which accounts for the enormous rates she is charging for private sittings.

EPISCOPAL RECTOR BECOMES CATHOLIC

Following the footsteps of Cardinal John H. Newman and other prelates of the Anglican and Episcopalian churches, the Rev. Henry R. Sargent, for years a resident of Melrose, has announced his intention of entering the Roman Catholic Church. Surprise in Melrose and this city, where he has been known for so long, will be very great. He left for Rome a few days ago, preparatory to entering that church.

The Rev. Mr. Sargent lately became a member of the Order of the Holy Cross at West Park, N. Y. He was brought up a Unitarian in Melrose but about twenty years ago united with the Episcopal Church. He was graduated from Harvard College in the class of '79. He received his theological education in Grace Theological Seminary, New York.

Before the Church Congress met in May of this year, Rev. Mr. Sargent in an address before the congregation of the Church of the Advent declared that if the Congress concluded to teach nothing heresy God's Church would not be affected by it.

ZUEBLIN 'CALLED' BY MISS MORGAN

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Prof. Charles Zueblin addressed a "Two Billion Dollar" audience in the Hudson Theatre today, as represented by the individual or family wealth of the women present. Practically the entire membership of the League for the Political Education, under whose auspices the lecture on "The Over-complaisant American" was given, was in attendance.

Among the members are Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Miss Grace H. Dodge, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan. Miss Annie Morgan occupied a front seat. She is the daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan.

In his talk, which was a plea to Americans to wake up and change the existing order of things, Professor Zueblin delivered a sharp rap at New York and the wealthy people, which was evidently not relished by some of the 1,000 women present.

Miss Morgan Protests.

At the conclusion of the speaker's remarks, Miss Morgan and Horace Fletcher, of mastication fame, went behind the scenes and good naturedly remonstrated with the professor for his plain language about New York.

"I think the lecture was fine, and I enjoyed every word of it—except some of the part about New York," replied Miss Morgan. "I don't think New York is so bad."

"Well," responded the professor, "I've just come back from a trip around the continent, and I tell you frankly I don't see how anyone can live here in the dirt and soot."

Robert Erskine Ely, director of the league for political education, congratulated Miss Morgan on her "spunk" in defending New York.

Professor Zueblin expressed himself as happy that some of the audience disagreed with him. "It means that the American spirit is being aroused to self-criticism," he said.

What the Professor Said.

Professor Zueblin's remarks, which aroused the ire of some of his listeners, were:

"You poor little mortals live huddled up here on this little Manhattan Island and you really have to live in a hurry because it is so convenient. You can get around and back and anywhere you want to in such a short time. And then, too, you can leave the suburbs whenever you like, the weather's hot, in the winter time or whenever you feel like it, you see.

"But did you ever think of the millions of people who have to live there all the year round amid the smoke and the dust and the smells and the germs.

"Nobody can really live in the true sense of the word huddled up as you inhabitants of New York are. It is impossible for life close to Mother Earth cannot be realized in New York.

ASQUITH TO QUIT IF BUDGET FAILS

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A report is current here to the effect that should the House of Lords reject the budget, Premier Asquith and his cabinet will immediately resign, with the object of forcing upon the conservative leaders the onus of providing for the country's financial needs. Whether or not this report is well founded, local Lansdowne's delay in presenting the expected resolution of the peers and house of has given rise to the idea that a closer realization of the financial confusion is bound to follow.

Duties of various kinds, it is pointed out, apportioned under the new budget by House of Commons resolutions, have been collected since April in an amount exceeding $35,000,000, and it is assumed that if the budget is now rejected, these duties will not be recoverable in the law courts. Added to this is $12,000,000 of death duties collected, which also might be required to be refunded.

Despite these formidable forecasts, the general impression in the city is that the Lords' action, the Government will ask the House of Commons to reaffirm its resolutions and declare them operative from now on.

FORGET BATONYI, PLEASE.

Mrs. Burke-Roche Requests It at a Freedom Dinner.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Mrs. Frances Burke-Roche formally announced the name of her divorced husband, Aurel Batonyi, at a little dinner given at the Hotel Gotham the evening she got her decree. It is understood two weeks society has been discussing with great glee the coming nuptials of Mrs. Mrs. Roche's way of celebrating her victory in the long and hard fought battle with the former "whip."

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lehr, Mr. and Mrs. Conde Nast, Mr. Mckee—not Mrs. Burke-Roche's name before marriage, Maurice and Francis Roche, Mr. Roche's son, of course, refused to the request that she be known henceforward as Mrs. Burke-Roche. It is understood that she wishes to eradicate as far as possible all the associations of her last marriage. Even her checks, it is said, are now signed "Burke-Roche."

HORSEWHIPS CHURCHILL.

BRISTOL, Eng., Nov. 13.—A wild-eyed suffragette, armed with a horsewhip, attacked Winston Spencer Churchill here, today, on his arrival. It was only a short struggle that the women was repulsed.

Mr. Churchill was not injured. He was conducted to refreshments after the whip from her hands after a short struggle, during which the fair lady occupied failing from the platform to the tracks below.

DEFENDS FERRER KILLING.

Spanish Teacher Justifies His Execution by Spain.

A defence of the execution of Ferrer, the Spanish liberal teacher, by the military authorities at Barcelona was expressed by Borel Soler, instructor of Spanish at the High School of Commerce in a lecture to the members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon. The Rev. H. H. Proctor, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Atlanta, Ga., who figured prominently in stopping the riots in Atlanta three years ago, spoke of the work being done in the south for the colored people.

"Spain has been brought before the world by the Ferrer episode," said Mr. Soler. "False accounts of the situation have been circulated. Ferrer, a finely educated, interesting and sincere man, had wrong ideals. He was a Socialist and Anarchist and his Modern schools taught socialism. He was brought before a military court and executed. The schools as others conversed in the riots had been closed. Spain is a modern nation and is becoming a world power. In trade she has seventh place, after U. S., Germany, England and the United States."

Miss Redway's "Coming Out."

Invitations were issued yesterday for a reception and tea to be given by Mrs. Herbert R. Barnes of the Hotel Brunswick Saturday afternoon, November 27, from 4 to 7 o'clock, at which Miss Grace Redway, will be formally introduced to Boston society.

HORSEWHIPS CHURCHILL.

BRISTOL, Eng., Nov. 13.—A wild-eyed suffragette, armed with a horsewhip, attacked Winston Spencer Churchill here, today, on his arrival. It was only a short struggle that the women was repulsed.

Mr. Churchill was not injured. He was conducted to refreshments after the whip from her hands after a short struggle, during which the fair lady occupied failing from the platform to the tracks below.

A practical demonstration of the Manse combination Coal and Gas Range will be a special feature this week at the C. E. Osgood Company's store, 1 to 7 Canal street, Boston. Everybody interested in cooking should attend.

BANKS SHUT DOWN ON TOWNS' NOTES

Boston banks, warned by the expose of conditions in Framingham, where it was found that over $250,000 in town notes had been forged, are tightening up on cities and towns desiring to sell municipal notes.

Practically every bank in Boston has decided to buy no town, city or county notes that are not certified to by a reputable financial institution.

The local banks made their first stand when Northampton attempted to secure a loan of $40,000 in anticipation of taxes. The time limit of the notes is four months. The note offered was not certified, and as a result but one bid was received. This was from a Boston banking house. This house not only named a high rate of interest, but required that the notes be certified. In the case of Northampton this certification will mean an additional expense of $10 on every $1,000.

LADY CROFTON AND YOUNG MONTAGU ELOPE AGAIN

Two Days After Being Forgiven for One Escapade Woman Starts Another.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Lady Crofton has run away again with young Montagu, this time to New Zealand. They departed from Charing Cross last night by the Indian Mail, just forty-eight hours after the woman had returned to live with her husband, Sir Morgan George Crofton, who had forgiven her for going to New York with Montagu.

The reconciliation had been brought about by Montagu's younger brother, who brought the pair back from Southampton.

Sir Morgan will not employ detectives to find his wife this time, as he did on the occasion of her first escapade, two months ago. On the contrary, he to-day instructed his lawyers to begin divorce proceedings. He will cast out of his life the woman who prefers another and the excitement of race-track admiration to the conventionalities of English life.

It is taken for granted now that the runaways will be married in New Zealand as soon as they hear that an English divorce has freed her.

There is no secrecy about the second elopement. Lady Crofton frankly told her husband that she was unable to remain respectable for her and that life with him was duller than she could stand after her delightful sojourn of six weeks in America with Montagu.

Montagu was frank with his younger brother. He went to the latter's apartments early afternoon and told him that he was about to leave England again with Lady Crofton and that he did not want to be followed or annoyed in any way.

From persuasion on one side and bribing on the other, the two brothers came to terms. The elder evidently got the worst of it, for when he appeared at the Charing Cross Station to-night in mariner he had a patch over his eye which, as she said, made him look ridiculous.

DRAPER AND PARTY ENTERTAINED IN NEW ORLEANS

Leave on Monday to Dedicate Baton Rouge Monument to Bay State Soldiers.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 13.—Governor Draper of Massachusetts, Miss Lena M. Remington, who will unveil the soldiers' monument at Baton Rouge, and the rest of the Massachusetts party, which includes members of the Governor's Council, Senate and House Committee on Military Affairs and their wives were to-day the guests of Governor Sanders of Louisiana and the city of New Orleans.

After a trip to the Confederate Soldiers' Home, Governor Draper and General Charles H. Taylor addressed the veterans of the Confederacy.

The visitors enjoyed a trolley trip about the city and a ride around the harbor on a tug. The battlefield where Andrew Jackson defeated the British in 1812 and the National Cemetery were visited. At the Country Club luncheon was served. In the afternoon a visit to the United States mint was made.

The Bostonians were also shown the headquarters of General Benjamin F. Butler during his rule over the city. Governor Draper expressed himself as delighted with his trip and General Taylor was enthusiastic over his meeting with the New Orleans of the Civil War, when he himself was a Federal prisoner in a hospital here.

Tonight the visitors were again the guests of Governor Sanders and Mayor Behrman at the French Opera House, at a performance of "La Favorita."

John G. Whittaker, Boston's attorney, was one of the first to greet the Bostonians and to inquire for the wife of the Governor. Mrs. Draper is a cousin of Mr. Wickliffe. When it was learned that she was the daughter of a Confederate general she was invited to meet the heads of the Confederate societies and was shown unusual attention.

The party will leave Monday morning for Baton Rouge. Governor Sanders and his aides, Major Sanders, will accompany the party to the Vicksburg National Park, and Miss Sanders will participate in the unveiling of the Massachusetts monument.

VACCINE TREATMENT FOR PNEUMONIA NEW DISCOVERY AT TUFTS

A TREATMENT for pneumonia, which is said to have reduced the death rate from 50 per cent. to 17 in a trial, is described in the current number of the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal by Dr. Timothy Leary, professor of pathology and bacteriology in Tufts College Medical School, in the inventory of which the discovery was made.

Under the caption of "Vaccine Treatment for Lobar Pneumonia," Professor Leary gives some startling facts about pneumonia. Long known to laymen as a terrible scourge they will be little surprised to hear Dr. Leary quoting the great Dr. Osler as authority for the statement that pneumonia is the most fatal of diseases, killing more than diphtheria and scarlet fever combined, as the chief cause of the increase.

The writer of this interesting paper refers to Dr. Meyer's statement that pneumonia is certainly not diminishing and the number of deaths caused by it is appalling."

Dr. Leary says for himself:

"Pneumonia has become in the last two years the chief cause of death in Boston and Massachusetts."

Treatment by Vaccination.

Dr. Leary's discovery is administered in the form of vaccination. The serum is called pneumococcus vaccine. He explains in detail how to administer the vaccine and overcome several of the accepted facts.

"Three years' experience in the use of vaccines and their application to both acute and chronic infections has shown that during the Winter 1908-9 to determine the value of vaccines in pneumonia," says Leary, "I have prepared for the usual number of cases which could be treated would lead to conclusive results, that the malignant types of the disease were selected.

"It is generally recognized that alcoholic pneumonia furnishes a much higher mortality than other types of the disease. Townsend and Prince give 45 per cent. as the mortality among the intemperate in their series, and Larrimore found a mortality of 45.5 per cent. in the hard drinking subdivision of his series. Alcoholism certainly attributes the high mortality of their series to the fact that almost one-ninth of their cases were alcoholic.

"It was thought that data obtained from the treatment of cases of alcoholic pneumonia would be least suggestive. An appeal was, therefore, made to several medical groups whom the writer addressed to test the value of vaccine on the alcoholic and extreme cases. Pneumococcus vaccine was furnished for the treatment of thirty-four cases of this type, of whom six died (17.7 per cent.). In a larger series of cases of ordinary pneumonia (forty-nine), 15 per cent. came to crisis in three days, and but two deaths were recorded. The total deaths for the series of eighty-three cases were eight, or 9.7 per cent.

"It was noted by most observers that rapid relief of toxemic conditions, which were present in serious cases, followed the use of vaccine, and in cases of unmanageable delirium an abatement of the delirium was prompt.

"We are not attempting to draw definite conclusions from this series because we consider the futility of deductions from so small a number of cases of a self-limited disease, but the sudden critical changes in the clinical picture are frequent.

"The results are encouraging enough, however, to justify the wider application of this treatment.

An Offer to Doctors.

"We believe that we are justified in concluding from our experience:

"1. That vaccines used in ordinary doses are harmless.

"2. That a wider application of vaccine material for definite conclusions a fund has been for the purpose of obtaining data from a sufficient number of cases to furnish material for definite conclusions a fund has been established, through the munificence of Mrs. Winfield Gilman, by means of which we will furnish without cost pneumococcus vaccine for the treatment of lobar pneumonia.

"A circular stating these facts will be sent to every registered physician in Massachusetts. On application from him there will be sent to his address, special delivery, a case containing a bottle of stock pneumococcus vaccine, a sterile syringe and a chart for data.

"Dr. Leary says it is his intention on the completion of the work he is now doing to request the Massachusetts Medical Society to appoint a committee to consider the data collected and to furnish conclusions as to the value of this method of treatment.

He says that the readiness on the part of himself and his associates will be indicated by the receipt of a circular by physicians stating the above facts.

MADAME STEINHIEL FREED BY JURORS

the foreman when pandemonium burst forth. A wild howl mixed with "bravos" went up from the packed courtroom. Men and women threw their hats in the air and howled and screamed with delight. M. Aubin, Mme. Steinhiel's attorney, and his colleagues embraced each other excitedly. Vainly the presiding judge rapped for order but his commands were drowned in the uproar.

Finally, the judge was able to make himself heard and he shouted:

"Bring in the accused."

Then followed another tense expectant period as the crowd concentrated its gaze upon the door leading to the prisoner's cells. Slowly it swung open and Mme. Steinhiel appeared, supported on either side by a gendarme. No entrance of a Bernhardt in one of her masterpieces could have been more thrillingly dramatic. For a moment, the black-eyed woman, her pallid face bowed to her breast, tottered and she seemed on the point of utter collapse.

The tremendous volley of cheers that greeted her must have given her strength and courage, for she raised her head, turned to the mass of faces and smiled a wan, thankful smile. Supported by the gendarmes, she staggered forward, and half fainting dropped to the floor beside her counsel. Then the jury announced the verdict, and another outburst drowned out the words of acquittal.

Mme. Steinhiel was freed and vindicated of the awful charge which had been hung over her. Her attorney, M. Aubin, leaped over the rail and lifted her to her feet in his arms. At the same moment the crowd surrounded them with a rush, howling like mad people.

Verdict Delights Paris.

The news of the verdict had been flashed to the crowds that surrounded the Palais de Justice for many blocks, and the cheers of tens of thousands who had been waiting many hours answered those from the court room. From the Palais de Justice to the Grand Hotel, a distance of two yards of Paris the news: "Mme. Steinhiel is acquitted," flashed from mouth to mouth and everywhere the crowds gave vent to demonstrations of approval and delight. Soon afterward special extras of the Paris newspapers conveyed the details of the verdict to the interested limits.

No such universal approval of interest in a criminal case has been seen in Paris in many years.

Although Mme. Steinhiel had been legally acquitted under the laws, the French procedure prescribes that the ceremony of "lifting the bolts" shall be performed before the physical release of the prisoner is accomplished. In pursuance of this, it is understood, Mme. Steinhiel was conducted by subterranean passageways to the old St. Lazare prison, where she last was confined and where her formal release will be given her some time this morning.

COLLEGE FAIR CLOSES.

Mayor and Mrs. Hibbard at Colonial Club Affair.

The Colonial Club of Dorchester closed its four days' college fair, the club's social society event of the Winter season, in the club house hall, Washington and Park streets, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon and evening, catering to the largest gathering in the organization's history.

The main hall of the club house was brilliantly decorated with the colors of the various colleges, the primary of Harvard holding the place of honor.

Governor Eben S. Draper and Mrs. H. H. Jaques, who was in general charge of the arrangements of the fair, were assisted by the members. Among the guests were Mayor and Mrs. George A. Hibbard, and Frederick Brand, chairman of the Board of Aldermen.

MINERS TRAPPED BY RUSHING FLAME

mouth of the shaft by rescuers just after the explosion, and the volunteers, who were driven back by the roaring fire, declared they saw scores of other dead bodies.

The disaster occurred at 5 p. m. and happened both changing shifts. The relief force started down at once, but was driven back instantly. The mine was sealed to prevent the fire escaping, so it is believed certain that if all were not burned to death or blown to pieces, at once, their escape would be impossible from the fiery furnace.

Explosion of Gas.

The explosion, which jarred the whole of the little mining community, was caused by a smoldering pile of hay, which set off the gas in the shaft.

One vein on which the men were working is 300 feet below the surface. Their only chance for life was to retreat to the ends of the levels, where there might possibly have been left enough air to sustain life until help came. The fans in the mine were stopped, the wires being all burned out.

While smoke and even jets of flame swept through the entrance, the rage used by the miners continued to be operated. The first load brought a score of miners, who were carried into the village. Less than a dozen bodies received in the rush for safety. The last trip was made when the bodies of the mine superintendent and his assistant were brought out.

For almost two hours officials and residents of Cherry tried to devise means to help the imprisoned laborers. When it was decided that the only way to check the flames was to board up the entrances to the mine, the opening was almost beneath. Only a mad dash through the fiery hell could be made until to-morrow morning.

Those who lost their lives are: Wendell Bassett, former president of the United Mine Workers, who left here to work in the mine.

When the whistle blew this morning over 470 men went about their work, which is on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. Those fellers represented practically the entire population of the town of working age.

The explosion is said to have been caused by fire-damp or gases, although the mine officials have had all precautions that it had taken every possible scientific precaution for the safety of its hundreds of employes.

Shrieking Women at Shaft.

When the alarm was given the few who had come from the mine rushed back to the shaft heads, accompanied by the women and children of the town. At first it was thought the smoke from a disaster had occurred which would have driven many of them ashamed, and their lamentations soon filled the air.

The miners who had escaped the entombment quickly began preparations for rescuing their comrades. The primitive pick and shovel were augmented by various scientific devices designed for the purpose, and in the hands of brave men they were soon being plied desperately in an endeavor in the form of entrance to the stifling blaze.

Each moment, however, the terrible fire beneath the earth became more retentive of its heat and the smoke that issued forth from the thousands of tons of soft coal was blinding. Hopefully the rescuers strove to battle their way into the mine, but they were driven back, crushed by the heat and suffocated by the stifling smoke.

Near the entrance they came upon the bodies of those who had been brought to the surface. Soon it became apparent that the rescuers being could enter the lower tunnels and live.

Still the miners worked desperately to find a way to safety. Telephone messages were sent to surrounding towns for assistance, and soon after the news spread, interurban and wagon road came expert rescuers from Belt, Berry and Mrs. H. H. Jaques, who was in general charge of the arrangements of the fair, were assisted by the members. Among the guests were Mayor and Mrs. George A. Hibbard, and Frederick Brand, chairman of the Board of Aldermen.

NINE INJURED IN REAR-END CRASH

Nine persons were hurt, several of them seriously, late last night when two electric cars came together in Causeway street, between the Warren Bridge and Beverly street. No one was fatally hurt.

At 11:40 a locomotive and the Union Freight Railway was shifting Boston & Maine freight cars. Three of the cars were derailed and crashed into the steel supports of the elevated railroad. They blocked the inbound track.

This necessitated the crossing over of the trolley cars and a Charlestown and Sunker Hill car was struck by a Boston & Northern out-bound car. The injured:

John Coughlin, 15 Johnson avenue, Charlestown, injuries to the right side.

Avon Minot, 29 Albion street, lacerated wounds on face.

Two others unknown.

GIRL HURT IN AUTO CRASH AFTER GAME

Miss Myra L. Swift, nineteen-year-old daughter of Richard Swift, of No. 26 Franklin street, Medford, is in the Somerville Hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain and probable fracture of the skull, as the result of an automobile accident while she and three friends were returning from the Harvard-Dartmouth game yesterday afternoon.

The automobile, driven by Leslie D. Cushman, struck a coal team in Mystic avenue, and was wrecked. The three women on the tonneau were thrown far away and their driver, William Lawrence, was hurled to the ground, but escaped serious injuries.

The other occupants of the automobile, Mr. Cushman, Chester J. Pike, Jr., of No. 3 Forest street, and Percy A. Hall of Winthrop street, Medford, were thrown to the ground and badly bruised, but were able to be removed to their homes.

Miss Swift and her friends graduated from the Medford High School in 1907, and she became a student at the normal school of gymnastics in Boston, later becoming a student at Wellesley College. Mr. Hall is a sergeant in the Governor's Light Guard of Medford, Co. E, 5th Inf., M. V. M.

Witnesses say that the lamps on Mr. Cushman's automobile were not lighted, but he denies this. The car is said to be the property of his father, George L. Cushman of No. 40 College avenue, Medford.

ESCAPES A LOCK TO GET HUSBAND

"WELL, when father, for some strange reason, locked me in my room and said I could not go out

Will any more I just smashed the door, met Will and we were married. That's all."

In this statement of why she had been married to William Hurst Whittaker, a boy of twenty years, who lives at No. 117 Hillside street, Roxbury, the principal fact in her interesting romance was told to Mrs. Whittaker, formerly Miss Mary Jane Kennedy.

The young woman is just Will's age herself.

"Mother died a few weeks ago," said Mrs. Whittaker last night, "and although Will had been coming to see me for a year the fact that father took the notion he must discontinue his visits. He told me to cut Will out and when I just refused to do it he locked me in my room.

"Think of that. An American girl of twenty locked in her room. I can't understand what ailed father. Well, I was in just not young sweet life I got out of that room, and Will and his mother were at the South station with his brother George and Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Riley, and we went to Providence and were married.

"There was nothing of an elopement; no Gretna Green business. Father did not want us to marry, so we decided to do what he would have done himself, just went and got married. Father sent word today that it's all right, to come home when I want to. But I'll stay with Will's mother until we get our own home. Once's own home is best, don't you think? I will visit mother, poor dear, would have been on my side had she been here. What do you suppose ailed father?"

LYNN POLICEMAN CONVERTING VOTERS

LYNN, Nov. 13.—The old politicians who at first were disposed to laugh at Eben W. Sears, Jr., the policeman who wants to be the Republican candidate for Mayor of Lynn, are beginning to watch his earnest, popular campaign now with a good deal of apprehension. Sears has been working like a Trojan, making several speeches daily from an open carriage in the streets, factory yards, everywhere. He has built up that following of voters which like novelty in politics and admire earnestness, and he will get a heavy vote in the Republican primaries Monday night.

The favorite in the betting for the nomination is John B. Newhall, a lawyer, member of an old family and backed up by the party machine. Others who think they have a chance are George M. Nichols, several times defeated when he was not a candidate in the Democratic route and now in the G. O. P., and the municipal candidate, Benjamin H. Davidson.

While these four are looking for the Republican nomination the Democrats silently saw wood and openly say fences, confident that if Mayor James E. Rich, the man who a few years ago was a trolley car motorman, gets the Democratic nomination away from the Democratic mayor lawyer William J. Kelley that it will be easy to elect him. Mr. Rich has several Republican votes to overcome. But he has a very large party following and many lines are forgotten by his supporters. They recall his service in the Spanish-American war, his movements when he was in the Board of Aldermen.

HAD BEST OF FIGHT.

Clarke and Bergin in Six Rounds at Portland.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 13.—Billy Clarke of Lawrence had a shade on Tommy Bergin of Lewiston in the main bout of the evening at the Pastime Athletic Club here tonight. Both boys fought fiercely throughout the six rounds and both were strong at the finish.

Clark showed superior knowledge of the fine points of the game and landed his blows well. He landed by far the greater number of blows, but Bergin appeared to possess the stiffer punch and was always dangerous.

In the semi-final Young Hayes Kelley knocked out Scotty Cohen in the third round, after having him groggy all through the second.

Joe Quinn easily had the better of Young Smart in the preliminary, but try as he would he could not put Smart away and Young Sawyer was the third man in the ring.

VANDERBILT SETS RECORD.

Easily Wins Coaching Race, and Makes Great Time.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Breaking all previous records, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, driving his four-in-hand, to-day won the coach race from Arrowhead Inn to Madison Square Garden. He covered the distance, nine and a half miles, in 38 minutes. Morris Howlett, the professional whip, his only competitor, was taken up and did not finish. Mr. Vanderbilt was enthusiastic-ally cheered when he drove his coach into the arena of Madison Square Garden.

It is to be erected on Seventh avenue, near Thirty-second street. It is to be a popular price hotel, the rates being from $ 1 to $2 a day with baths.

QUADRUPLE USE OF CABLE.

S. D. Field's New Invention Tried Out at Havana.

PITTSFIELD, Nov. 13.—Steven D. Field, nephew of Cyrus W. Field, inventor of the first ocean cable, has just performed in Havana, where he saw in successful operation his new invention, the quadruplex instrument for transmitting four messages at the same time over a single cable. It was sent on the cable from Havana to Key West, a distance of 100 miles.

It has never before been possible to send more than one message at a time over a cable. The invention was made in a laboratory at Stockbridge.

'FOUR' SEEK ANYONE WHO CAN BEAT FITZGERALD

THE Boston Mayoralty campaign, which is being conducted by reformers, and sub-committees, has resolved itself into a movement not to nominate and elect the man who would make the best Mayor of Boston, but to find the man who will make the strongest candidate against former Mayor Fitzgerald.

That is the only inference to be drawn from a statement of a member of the sub-Committee of Four, which is to report the names of "one or more" desirable Mayoralty candidates to the Committee of Seven Hundred and Fifty next Wednesday. The statement of this sub-committee member confirms what a number of folks not identified with the reform movement have known, but have been afraid to say for several days.

A further statement last night by this member of the Sub-Committee of Four that "we're way up in the air and we don't know where we're going to land," is the best testimony thus far offered as to what this body purposes to do.

Seven Democratic leaders, headed by President James A. Donovan, of the Democratic City Committee, told the Committee of Four yesterday that "James J. Storrow cannot defeat John F. Fitzgerald." The Donovan Seven are anti-Fitz. The Donovanites want Joseph H. O'Neil to receive the committee's endorsement.

Republican City Committee men interviewed yesterday by members of the committee of four find that the point blank answer that "more Republicans will vote for Fitzgerald than will vote for Storrow if the fight is between those three men." The Republican leaders want Former Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., named by the Committee and made to run whether he wants to or not.

"Four" Want Help.

The men who gave the Committee of One Hundred and Fifty movement its life-blood and something to say in the selection of sub-committees are still shouting for Storrow. Mr. Storrow himself is in the same attitude that he occupied a week ago, "willing—he doesn't say "anxious"—to lend his aid of a non-partisan representative of all classes of citizens that I run for Mayor."

The American is in possession of information that the Sub-Committee of Four are about as happy as so many sailors on a wrecked ship. The Sub-Committee wants help. Thus far the only help they received has been from sources which poohpoohed the suggestions of the would-be helpers.

Friends of the Storrow candidacy have urged the Sub-Committee to "stick it out; Storrow is coming fast; all you have to do is pull Hibbard out."

A period of the Sub-Committee of Four said, last night:

"While our committee has in mind, of course, the public interests in Boston, we feel that what we must find is not the man who would make the best Mayor, but the man who is best able to defeat Fitzgerald.

"It's no use to pick for our candidate the man who would make the best Mayor if that man is going to be defeated. What's the good of all this work if we're going to be whipped in the end?

Fitzgerald Right There.

The one concrete thing in this campaign that anybody is willing to stand for now is the candidacy of Fitzgerald. His most cordial enemies admit that the man who is pleading for "vindication for myself and my family" has a strong and powerful field looking for its goats.

Take for instance that the mayoralty candidacies of George A. Hibbard, Nathaniel H. Taylor, Matthew Cummings and a few others are also stern realities, but the dominating element which makes for opposition to the Fitzgerald candidacy has shown itself to be the consolidation.

The candidacy of James A. Gallivan, Joseph H. O'Neil or Curtis Guild, Jr.—one to be backed by the two others if he runs—are probabilities, and strong ones.

A witness which the sub-committee of four sent out last night to some of its friends was sought for the Americus. It is said, in effect, that Storrow, O'Neil and Guild make up the committee's mayoralty roll of honor and that one or the three of them would be recommended to the full committee of seven hundred and fifty if the latter body were obliged to report at once.

The Gaston contingent is still doing all it can to back the Storrow boom, 60½ street said yesterday. The Gaston forces they opined would be with Fitzgerald if Storrow were the other candidate against him, and might smile on O'Neil if he entered the race.

Gallivan Decides.

Friends of the Storrow boom who are running a little side campaign are trying to induce John H. Murphy, James J. Phelan or some other prominent Democrat to enter the contest. A surplus of Democratic candidates and a shortage of Republicans would help the Storrow candidacy, they figure.

The desertion of Mayor Hibbard's candidacy for reelection by Deputy Penal Institutions Commissioner Herbert Capen gave politicians something to talk about yesterday. Carruth was once an ardent Fitzgerald supporter. After Hibbard had defeated Fitzgerald, politicians who looked at the Hibbard band-wagon saw Carruth on the front seat.

Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan will make up his mind to-day about being a candidate for Mayor. He has been requested by a Storrow Committee of the peninsula district to stand as their reform candidate.

PURITAN OWNERS FIGHT TO SAVE HOTEL'S BAY

The rear of the Hotel Puritan, showing the twenty-four ornate bay windows ordered removed by court.

NOTWITHSTANDING the peremptory order issued by Judge Braley of the Supreme Court, the 24 bay windows on the rear of the new Hotel Puritan, which is to be opened to the public to-morrow night, will not be removed until the highest court which it is possible to reach on an appeal has given its decision.

This is the declaration made last evening by John D. Hardy, trustee of the estate of the late William H. Rice, who erected the hotel. He claims that the suit to compel the removal of the bay windows, which extend into the passageway back of the hotel, is merely the work of one person, and that all the other abutters upon that passageway have given assent to their construction.

The land on the opposite side of the passageway is owned by the Rice estate, having been bought in order that the rear portion of the hotel may have ample light and air. There are no buildings on the land.

This suit to compel the owners of a new hotel to remove a portion of the structure is similar in effect to the famous Hotel Westminster case where, after several years of legal fighting, the owners were forced to remove the entire top story, including a beautiful cornice and many fine pieces of sculptured ornamentation. The claim at that time was that the upper portion of the building was ten feet higher than the law permitted.

Like Westminster Case.

It was shown that this law was passed after the plans for the building had been accepted by the city and all the material ordered. At the time the law was passed, the frame work of the Westminster was already up to the height allowed by the old law. The owners, however, were forced to spend $40,000 in removing the upper portion, leaving the roof a pure peak instead of slightly tilting, entirely out of keeping with the beautiful Copley square. Since then, time a roof garden, in Summer, has taken away some of the looks of barrenness, but in Winter the top of the building looks as though it had been raked by a cyclone. John D. Hardy, the owner of the Hotel Puritan, said last night:

"This agitation was started last March. I went to every property owner in the vicinity and they all agreed with me in petition, to allow me to build the windows. This one exception was Mrs. Frederick Kendall, who complains the Colonial Hotel next adjoining the Puritan property, although a vacant lot separates the two buildings. The Colonial property belongs to George Wheelwright, who readily gave his permission, but Mrs. Kendall objected.

Next to the Somerset.

"I did not learn that Mrs. Kendall had control until after the windows were completed. I was willing then, as I always have been, to pay her such damages as she thinks necessary. The windows do not interfere with her estate in the least, as she admits, for her contention is that the passageway was to be kept open to the sky. Well, I will leave it to the judgment of any person who will look at the Puritan passageway, the vacant lot opposite the Puritan, and the entire bay windows, whether the passageway is obstructed in the least.

"Now that I have lost the first step in the case I will fight it to a finish. I am and always have been willing to pay proper claims for damages, but this case is different.

"The Puritan adjoins the Hotel Somerset, on Commonwealth avenue, and is unique in many ways. It is built as a very high class family hotel and is to be run and managed by such well-known society people as Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Thayer, Mrs. H. S. Slater, and others.

$12,000 ADDED TO PAYROLL BY MAYOR

Coincident with the announcement that he will approve no more salary increases until after January 11, Mayor Hibbard has approved the appointment of the library trustees granting increases in compensation to 104 employes of the Central Station and branch libraries that will increase the annual payroll approximately $12,000.

These increases were recommended by J. H. Benton and Samuel Carr, who were appointed by Mayor Hibbard to revise the payroll and recommended changes in the number, rating or compensation of the employes.

James C. White, the Mayor's secretary, states that the trustees simply made a graded salary for each position in the library service and the personality or the particular ability of those who may be/are now not considered.

The changes make the average salary paid the entire library, including janitorial staff, excluding janitors and mechanical employments, $716.45.

CITY HALL AXE IS ALL READY TO USE

Information That "Hibbard Cannot Win" Not Welcome; Boudrot Seeks Names.

Department heads have been given to understand that working for opponents of Mayor Hibbard with a view to being reelected in the event of the Mayor's defeat for re-election, is a policy that may cause the axe to swing at City Hall before election day.

Gratuitous information that "Mayor Hibbard has no chance in the world and that he ought to retire" will not be welcomed. Assistant Corporation Counsel Carruth is the first city official to be so informed.

The Mayor has headquarters at the City Club and is pushing his campaign actively. Assistant Secretary Boudrot has been given a leave of absence in order that he may direct the work of getting signatures. Yesterday he reported that the Mayor's papers had 2,500 signatures.

VAUGHAN'S REFUSAL DICTATED BY WIFE

WORCESTER, Nov. 13.—Because his home ties were more to him than a position on the Superior Court bench, Ernest H. Vaughan of Worcester this week declined the appointment tendered him by Governor Draper. Friendship for the Governor, loyalty to the Worcester County Bar Association and the sense of duty that first impelled him to accept all when down before the bewitching of the little woman of his home and his heart, when she pleaded that no longer would she see her husband's companionship for the grueller part of his time. She was not willing, during the years that she has made herself practically a

"Widow of many a lawyer's life is to achieve the honor of a judgeship, and when that honor comes it is emphatically declined, especially after an acceptance, the reason for which is entirely feminine. Special reason for it. The curious interest varies in America Bishops of the Church.

Of London the personal way in which I have written. My purpose is to try to give an idea of how Lambeth Conference interprets the 'Central Constitutive Body,' and to learn whether his interpretation is in accordance with my own or with that of others in England."

Archbishop Replies.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, apparently alarmed at Bishop Lawrence's discretness at once replied. His letter is of course diplomatic but it is not without a touch of humor. The Archbishop wrote:

"My dear Bishop Lawrence:

"I should be sorry if any words spoken by me to my own diocesan conference should have given you pain. I am sure that without at the moment any special thought about the United Kingdom, should lead anybody to imagine that I had changed the opinions I have always held and expressed about the character and limitations of our decennial Lambeth conferences. I can perhaps show best my own cordial concurrence in what you say as to the way in which we ought to regard these important gatherings by referring you, and anyone else who is concerned, to my public letter which was circulated a year ago, soon after the conclusion of the conference. I append a copy of that letter. Its central paragraphs are, I think, to the point.

"What is true of the conference as a whole is, of course true, also, of the Central Consultative Body whose appointment was recommended by the conference. Such a body voluntarily constituted by the action of the groups of bishops in different parts of the world, who care to send a representative or representatives to give to one another at Lambeth the benefit of their varied experience, can obviously possess no other authority than such as is always attached by reasonable people to what is deliberately said by capable and experienced leaders of thought and action.

"Shall Miss Americane."

"* * * We shall miss the counsel of the American bishops and we shall perfectly understand it, should you deem it necessary to deny us the personal co-operation we so highly value.

"RANDALL CANTUAR.

"Archbishop of Canterbury."

The controversy is the only topic of conversation in the Episcopal Church. The Churchman, in its issue of yesterday, devotes several columns to it, making it the leading article. Editor Lewis Parker thinks there is special significance in the correspondence, saying:

"It is the frankest and clearest declaration of the position of the American church since the general convention, formally replied to the resolutions of the Lambeth conference of 1897. The Archbishop's view of the Lambeth conference given in his regular address to his diocesan conference, made it incumbent upon some American bishop to explain the official attitude of the American Episcopate at Lambeth."

Attitude Is Approved.

Editor McKee, whose writings are all ways given profound consideration in his church, expresses the opinion that probably not a single American bishop will dissent from the position taken by Bishop Lawrence that, "Neither the House of Deputies nor the House of Bishops would give that subject for electing representatives to a committee body favorable consideration."

He says, too, that the American Church is determined to keep its complete organic independence of the Church of England."

SIX IN FIGHT TO LEAD DEMOCRATS

Lowell Campaign Grows in Bitterness During Race for Mayoralty.

LOWELL, Nov. 13.—With six candidates battling for the Democratic nomination for Mayor and all making speeches at the mill gates and on the street corners, the heaviest votes ever polled in a Lowell election is looked for.

In the recent State elections Lowell gave Valley a lead of about 2,400, and Foss 2,288. Were these figures to be taken to determine Lowell's political complexion in local elections, the successful man of the six Democratic candidates would have an easy time defeating George H. Brown, the one candidate, who is up for a second term. But these figures do not indicate the real situation, so far as party strength is concerned in municipal elections.

There are so many factions in both parties when it comes to a city election that for local offices that parts lines are lost to a large extent. The six candidates are as follows: James J. Darcy, William E. Mahoney, Robert J. Crowley, James E. O'Donnell, John Meehan, John W. Daly.

The picturesque feature of the campaign is found at the mill gates and in the streets, where rallies are held daily at hours chosen for these meetings are most in greatest numbers as the operatives are to be found in the vicinity of the gates, and at the noon hour when thousands are in circulation in the downtown streets. Some of the latest language ever heard in a campaign appeals to the voters, and some of the campaign names J. Darcy's attacks have been made without any attempt to conceal the identity of those against whom they are directed.

Brown Has Right of Way.

The other candidates have been more moderate, and have made a show at presenting party platforms. In the interests of the winner of the present battle.

Mayor Brown has been given the right of way by the Republican machine, but there is a persistent rumor that after the nominations are made a Republican will step to the front as an independent candidate, and that Mayor Brown will have a big fight on his hands is generally believed. Resentment at the "slamming process" practised by Mayor Brown so freely all year is finding emphatic expression among Republicans, and petitions to this effect have been presented against him for the nomination and for the coming party discord, was the statement made to-day by a party leader. It was argued by Republicans that if Brown was defeated for the nomination he would run independently and create a disruption in the party that would have its effect in electing for years to come. Should a Republican run independently, it will not be with the approval of the Republican city committee as a whole.

Plan Series of Rallies.

Mayor Brown has not made a speech in the present campaign, for the reason that it hasn't been necessary, but he will begin a series of rallies similar to those of last year, just as soon as the nominations are decided on November 23. Then the campaign will enter upon a period of Lowell's political history, according to the politicians here.

WILSON REFUSES RAILROAD ADVICE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary James Wilson of the Department of Agriculture says that the railroads should assist him in his administration by suggestions as to the necessity of encouraging farming.

"The Department of Agriculture is on the job all right, but we aren't waging an advertising campaign just to show how busy we are."

This is Secretary of Agriculture Wilson's reply to President William C. Brown of the New York Central Railroad. The latter suggested that the government economize on warships and instead establish experimental farms in every State.

"We are already spending something like $18,000,000 for the very sort of work President Brown speaks of. Evidently he doesn't know what is going on throughout the country," said Mr. Wilson. "We are establishing experimental stations and farms as fast as we can, and from them the government reaps an indirect profit. It is the farmer, of course, who gets the profits. We are helping him to grow better crops, larger crops, and more diverse crops."

Sixteen Men Arrested.

Armed with a warrant, a big squad of police last night entered No. 12 Kneeland street and arrested sixteen men. The police secured 250 playing cards, seventy-seven dominoes, thirty poker chips, a number of dice, eleven packs of cards and a roulette. The men were charged with being present wher gambling implements were found.

COLE WARNS G. O. P. OF PARTY REVOLT

A warning note that "the awakening in the Republican party in Massachusetts will become a revolt unless recognition is given to the rank and file of voters who make up the party's majority," is sounded by John N. Cole, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, in yesterday's issue of the Boston Herald. Mr. Cole, in a pointed editorial Mr. Cole hands a few hard raps at Senator Lodge, but confines his attack of a week ago on "the aggressive interference of certain branches of the Lodge leadership with the rights of those who follow it."

By "certain branches of the Lodge leadership" Mr. Cole is understood to mean particularly Augustus Peabody Gardner, the son-in-law of Congressman Gardner, and with whom he has been at swords' points since Gardner backed Lodge's unfriendly aim against Senator Cole for the U. S. nomination for Lieutenant-Governor.

"How anyone can read into last week's comment, or anything else that has appeared in the Transcript, unfair criticism of the senior Senator of the Commonwealth, the writer cannot understand. Lodge is a big man, and to no newspaper, in our admiration for the many qualities possessed by Senator Lodge, and in the pride we feel over the honor he has brought to the United States Senate, * * * it isn't the occasion for leadership that is now on trial in Massachusetts, and that came so near to a defeat of the Republican party. It will become a revolt unless wisdom is shown, and recognition is given to the great rank and file of voters who after all make the party's backbone."

BISHOP LAWRENCE RESENTS BRITISH RULE OVER CHURCH IN LETTER TO CANTERBURY

THE members of the great Episcopal Church of the United States almost without exception applaud Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts for a remarkable letter he has sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury, in which he practically tells the primate of all England that he must banish any notion he has and others of the Church of England may have had, or still maintain, of ever making the American Church a dependency.

In the belief of the bishops of the church in this country the Archbishop of Canterbury in reality has little more power and more than to become in the Anglican communion what the Pope is in the Roman Catholic faith; in short, to be an English ruler governing the church in England and Wales alone, and if possible, to have the American branch in communion on the same basis as a British colony.

Reject Domination.

It is said by those who indorse Bishop Lawrence's ultimatum that the British plan began as far back as the late sixties, when the Lambeth conferences were established. It culminated at the most recent Lambeth conference of last year when the American bishops found themselves placed in a position with the prelates from all British dependencies. They resented it, before it was possible at the time. Bishop Lawrence's letter voices this sentiment grown in the year just closing to what is regarded as an attempt of the British attempt at domination.

"You know the church in this country well enough to appreciate that while this church is far from intending to depart from the Church of England in any essential point of doctrine or worship, it is determined, at all events, so far as the present generation can see, to keep its complete autonomy as a branch of the Church of England, and in working out the problems which has placed before it in this land to make its contribution to the causes and Christian civilization."

Not a Legislative Council.

The Archbishop has organized "A Central Consultative Body," to which several American bishops are invited to become members, but underneath the lines this is merely an effort to get control in the legislation of the American church.

Bishop Lawrence, while most courteous in his reply to the Archbishop, has a keen business sagacity, and notices the motive to place more legislative power in the hands of the Archbishop, which will extend to the American church.

American bishops are willing to go to England and attend the Lambeth Conference, when it is only a conference, but if the Archbishop intends to make it a body like the House of Bishops he will give it a wide berth.

Bishop Lawrence has come out valiantly for the independence of the American Episcopal Church and will not take its church back to Colonial times, when it was subservient to the English Anglicanism Society.

Personal extracts from the letter of Bishop Lawrence follow:

"I am led to be too frankly my interpretation, for though speaking for myself only, it is, I think, that of a number of the American bishops who attended the Lambeth Conference.

"We were, as you well said, a conference and not a legislative council. I did not feel that I broke faith with the Archbishop of Canterbury Body' will be of much practical value to America Bishops of the Church.

BRILLIANT GRIDIRON CONTEST ABOUNDS IN SPECTACULAR PLAYS

elty. Packed about the Stadium, and filling every conceivable space in the large open fields, were hundreds of automobiles. The Vanderbilt cup race never had so many.

Stretched over the Dartmouth cheering was a huge green flag with the word "Dartmouth" in white letters three feet high. Beneath this flag was the cheering section from Hanover, peopled by 5,000 lusty lads from the fastness of New Hampshire and back in Massachusetts. They were flanked by thousands of pretty girls, in green attire, all armed with green Dartmouth flags. A band raised the spirits of the already excited youths by discussing Dartmouth College songs.

Directly opposite, in the west stand, were the Cambridge men, the greatest exponents of them seen in years. They, too, were flanked with a goodly throng. Their band hurled defiance at the most plaintive across the field, and there was a constant exchange of college noise and melody.

At either end and fringing the yelling youths were the unattached thousands, who divided their cheers impartially, and were as generous with Dartmouth as with their own Cambridge classmates.

Before this audience, which was alternately wild or silent with intense excitement, the game was played.

For the first half of the struggle the teams swayed and lurched across the field first in Harvard territory and then in Dartmouth ground. For minutes at a time the ball would be carried back and forth over sixty yards of space, the middle of the gridiron, it was a fierce, back and forth battle, one that fascinated with extreme interest.

Battle of Sheer Weight.

In the second half both teams went in to win by sheer weight, and between fast tearing tactics and sensational open plays Harvard gradually wore Dartmouth down and crossed the line. Then Dartmouth went to the task, and, after ten minutes of amazing play, rushed the ball to within ten yards of the Harvard line, only to lose it there on a misplaced forward pass. It was here that Frothingham got the ball and ran it a third of the distance down the field. By steady line smashes Harvard then took it the rest of the distance, save only fifteen yards, where Leslie got a wonderful forward pass and scored the second touchdown.

A few minutes later the fortunes of war again changed and Dartmouth, once more within striking distance of the Crimson goal line, was thrown back by a costly fumble. Tobin kicked the pigskin squarely and surely between the goal posts and Dartmouth scored.

The battle was then on in earnest, and except for one wholesomely contested thrust out the second half, that men battled desperately for the last few minutes. When the two elevens, hoarse and weak, gathered in the centre of the field to give their parting cheers, men were only seven of the original total present in each group. Forty men had played in the game.

It looked like rain before the game, but this did not dampen the ardor of the football enthusiasts, nor did it reduce the size of the crowd. It had a chill and wind, and at first was a trifle too warm for the best football. But it grew colder as the afternoon waned, and this infused the teams with more life and vigor.

And just as the second half opened, the sun came out from behind the clouds and shone over the field the rest of the afternoon. Between the halves a gay time was kept watch of the bulletin board, where was displayed the Yale-Princeton score, and cheered the success of the enemy. Harvard must meet next Saturday.

The game abounded with remarkable plays, sandwiched in between gruelling line bucking and consistent crushing down of giant players as they ground together in mass plays. Harvard received the kick-off, and, after a short gain, punted to Dartmouth's 45-yard line. Here Dartmouth made its first gain, a short one, and then Harvard got the ball on downs.

Then Corbett and Leslie smashed through the Dartmouth line for four short gains and there was a tremendous shout from the wagers of the green when Dartmouth held fast on the last play and once more had the ball.

Marks, the almost invincible Dartmouth fullback, tried two gains, was thrown in his tracks the second and Ingersoll kicked. This landed the ball twenty-five yards over the centre of the field, where O'Flaherty got it on the run, but was hurled to the ground by Daly, but Dartmouth left end, before he could advance a foot. Daly and his colleague Rankert, at right end, were down the field like race horses and were nailing the Harvard punt catchers before they could scarcely more than recover their balance. They soon had the Harvard backs signaling for fair catches.

After O'Flaherty caught his punt Minot put across a pike kick and got five yards through the line. Then Leslie was given the ball on a double pass, executed so quickly that the Dartmouth men scarcely saw the ball, and before he could be thrown he had crossed the centre of the gridiron and cleaned up eighteen yards for the Crimson. The next two plays, however, Dartmouth stood like a stone wall and the ball was not advanced an foot. So Minot tell back for another kick and landed the leather squarely in Marks' hands eighteen yards from the Dartmouth goal.

On the next play Dartmouth responded to the Harvard double pass with one of its own. It was Ingersoll who got the ball, and the lively Dartmouth left halfback got ten yards around left end with it before Fish landed him on the ground.

Dartmouth wanted the ball further away from the danger line, however, and was willing to lose it to gain space. So after the next play, Ingersoll kicked again and Fish grabbed it forty yards down the field. He dodged every Dartmouth man who got in his way and bowled them over like ninepins, then put on his best speed for the goal. Finally Reidy got him, and threw the big foot three giant yards with such force that Fish was completely down and out. His neck was bent double in the tackle and for a few moments it looked as if he might have injured the fate that befell Byrne, who played free to face with death and went to his death in the West Point game.

Fish Wins a Long Harvard Cheer.

He finally recovered, though, and stood in line again, while ten thousand Harvard throats gave the long "Harvard! Harvard! Harvard! Fish! Fish! Fish!" cheer that was given the next two plays and he leaped the line, once for a loss and on the second time with three yards to be good. The play was a new line attack, just sprung from the field, and Dartmouth was pierced without invoking a penalty.

Minot followed this up with a thirty-yard kick, which Dartmouth returned fifteen yards. Marks plunged through left guard for seven yards, and then he picked up the ball Corbett returned it seven yards, but the following play the ball stopped on the centre of the Harvard men had all they could do to recover it before the Dartmouth line got through. Minot kicked thirty yards, out of bounds, and for three successive plays the ball swayed around the centre chalk line. They had gotten well warmed up to this time, and the struggle both sides were beginning to play off-side. In two minutes Harvard was penalized five yards and Dartmouth fifteen.

Marks got his fifteen yards back with a splendid run around right end and then kicked to O'Flaherty on the forty-yard line. O'Flaherty is no fool as a base when he once gets the ball in his hands on the ball, and this time he kicked back fifteen yards through no opening held before he was thrown, and made Harvard's second fumble directly after that, but Dartmouth was not equal to the task in a twinkling and Harvard actually gained eighty yards on the play.

Minot and Ingersoll exchanged punts and Minot and Corbett were headed off for the plunges, which netted them twenty-two yards. Minot kicked Ingersoll on the latter's 25-yard line, and the Dartmouth fullback was downed in his tracks. Then he was knocked out. But he got the ball back a moment later and the Dartmouth men yelled themselves hoarse.

O'Flaherty Drops the Ball.

Marks banged his way through left guard for five yards and Ingersoll got two yards around right end. Marks kicked again, and this time O'Flaherty dropped the ball twenty-five yards from his goal line.

Leslie and Corbett, in three assaults on the Dartmouth line, worked the ball along fifteen yards, whence Minot boosted it forty yards to Ryan, who ran back fifteen yards. Marks got through the Harvard line next time, but Ingersoll was followed and HARVARD beat Dartmouth and was satisfied. The Crimson did not show a she had up her sleeve by any means. That is reserved for Yale at the Stadium. The fine methods of the coaches in hiding back the real strength of the Harvard team was apparent. Better proof was in evidence in the second half. When Harvard had the game comparatively safe the best men in the lineup were pulled out and the second string candidates sent in, that the star members of the Crimson attack might be fresh for greater deeds when the rushing comes on the gridiron to test the sharpness of his teeth.

The win over Dartmouth brought out more forcibly than anything else the power that lies within the capabilities of the Crimson eleven.

Darcneuth' Game Attack.

Never did the New Hampshire collegians fight with more zeal to carry on day. Time and time again they battled Harvard's attack to a stand, like those who stand, and then by rushing the line where it started. That's the way they fought, and when the teams left the field with a few scores. It was a fight that delighted the spectators.

Dartmouth had shot its bolt, shown when the persistent hammering began again.

It was not an ideal day for football, though the fog mercifully shut down and kept off all but a few yards of the field. A drop of fifteen degrees in the temperature would have been welcomed by the players, but they did not let the cold get much toward the end of the second half began to show signs of the fierce pace.

The crowd came early — a wonderful crowd. It poured in through the Dana gate entrance. At 1:30 they were marching to segments march, in close formation, a steady tide of happy people, waving their colors and shouting the songs of their schools in their seats. The Yale violets took the east side of the field and the Princeton chrysanthemums went to the west. Fifteen minutes before the beginning of the game only the latecomers were left scurrying to the aisles.

Yale Man Kicks Off.

"Handsome Dan, the Fourth" was led down the Yale side of the field and the students gave him a terrific roar of welcome, which he acknowledged with a grin and a smile. "Handsome Dan" is a bulldog and the homeliest of his breed, but the very thought of it here in New Haven sets well-bred, fastidious persons on the Yale rosters and buried at the Princeton men.

At 2:15 the rival squads of eleven showed over the crest at the northeast entrance and a wonderful cheer arose. People stood up and roared a welcome to the Yale team was a mighty one, and when Captain Coy well in the lead, hugging the football tightly under his arm. When he came up, the tall leaders swung their megaphones and the whole Yale section reached across the field. Hardly had it died down when the direction side rose up in a solid body of yellow and blue and swept around the gridiron, and a third fight by the side of the Princeton men to the line cheerers.

The practice plays were not long delayed. After snappy plays by both teams, a few long punts, the crowd saw Yale kick off, saw it misfield and kicked the ball well into the centre of the field, and missed. Princeton started to defend the south goal, the wildest kind of rush. Connoy took a few preliminary hops and boosted the ball over Princeton's territory.

Welsh brought it back twelve yards and after one try around the end Yale was kicked. Phillips brought the ball back to the middle of the field in a good run and dodging his way through half a dozen Princeton men. Then Yale began to march steadily toward the goal, which ended in failure. Phillips had run the ball down to Princeton's big scoring captain and left tackle of the Tigers.

Coy Gains Eight Yards.

Coy put his head down and took his first smash at the Princeton line, gaining eight yards. Once more the backs thrown into the Princeton line and the ball driven through for seven yards and rested on Princeton's own forty-yard line. Dennis was given the ball and ripped through between centre and left tackle for another seven yards and there was a groan when the ball came back to Princeton's forty as a penalty for holding in the line.

Coy dropped back and tried a forward pass to Hobbs, which was knocked down. Another blow thundered dropped on it on the yard mile and a cannon to distance himself, and then threw wild for a forward pass to Hobbs, which was knocked down and fell to the ball. Coy made the distance on third down.

Yale again started for a goal from the middle of the field. Metcalfe had pushed the ball to centre and this time the Princeton ends were there and the ball rested on Princeton's eighteen-yard line.

"Oh, Coy! Let's kick a goal!" yelled the Yale rooters, and Coy shook his head like a young bull and hammered for a first down gain. Once more they gave him the ball, but other backs took him in the centre, so he came in and the Yale Dreadnought grabbed him about the waist and fairly buried him at the Princeton line. With eight men pushing him behind and pulling him in front, the captain waded through the melee, picking up six or seven Tigers on the way.

Yale Scores Again.

When he came out on the other side he resembled a swarm of bees, but he was still on his feet and still moving about toward the goal. At last the swarm came to the ground just one yard short of the goal line. This time Princeton gave up hope of everything but a touchback, and Yale was not fumbling anything yet. Once more they jammed Coy into the broken Tiger line for a touchdown and once more the Princeton blue flags rushed to the east side of the arena and every Yale cheer had a jumping "Coy!" tucked on the end of it.

"The skipper punted out from the corner of the field and Pop Corey found the ball. As before, Hobbs booted the ball between the goal posts, so his kick for goal did not have reached it with an ebbing.

The end of the game found the stalwart Yale backers punting the ball back and forth with Yale getting the better of Princeton as time progressed.

Then one more whistle there came the old-time avalanche of blue flags into the arena and the whooping, howling, dashing students hurtled past the officials and over the backs of the departing Princeton supporters.

New Haven was a lively village this evening. Coy's magnificent generalship is not a gentle whisper to the tumult which greeted the victorious Yale warriors of Eli Yale's home town. It isn't often they get a chance to celebrate a 17 to 0 victory over the tricky Tiger and they made the loudest and the best of it.

PRINCETON PLAYED PLUCKY GAME, SAYS CAPT. COY OF YALE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 13.—Every one of the Yale football players was able to join the party at the training table in the New Haven House for dinner to-night and the way the food was consumed was startling. Head Coach Howard Jones was one of the most delighted directors of a winning team Yale ever turned out, he said.

"I am happy that the Yale team cleaned up its victory so handsomely. Princeton fought a dogged game and I felt at times that we had no right to expect a score more than a few points.

"The game was fought under trying weather conditions but all the men took them through in his fearless fashion excepting the slight injury to Vaughan of the field in the first period. He played with, and my faith in the team is still strong. I did not believe that Princeton would score."

Captain Ted Coy said:

"Princeton deserves credit for playing a plucky, stubborn game. They kept up their fight and all our scores were hard earned. I enjoyed the game. I didn't get a scratch and I think that my team was improved some. At any rate, it feels better to-night. I wanted to play the whole game, although the bent was at times trying."

"The men came through in fine shape," said Trainer John Mack. "But it will take several days for the injuries of Daly and Vaughan to heal. I think that both should be able to start the Harvard game."

The Yale players were weighed after the game. Coy lost the most weight, dropping ten pounds. It was found that Daly had wrenched his shoulder. Vaughan's knee was strained.

Head Coach McCormick and Captain Hedgeling of the Princeton eleven wouldn't say a word about to-day's game except, to state that none of their players were severely injured.

PROF. MUNSTERBERG BARS PSYCOLOGY TEST AT TRIAL

WITHIN a few days Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard, an acknowledged expert in psychology, has declined three times to make psychological readings in murder trials. Two years ago and a half ago a conviction is not a gentle whisper to the tumult which greeted the victorious Yale warriors of Eli Yale's home town. It isn't often they get a chance to celebrate a 17 to 0 victory over the tricky Tiger and they made the loudest and the best of it.

Professor Munsterberg declared in an address to the North Shore Club of Lynn.

"I was invited," he said, "by a famous western lawyer to testify as a psychological expert in the case of a young doctor who had been charged with murder in the first degree. The defence is that the woman committed suicide. Five years ago such a request from a lawyer would have been unthinkable. Shortly after a situation is reported. More delay.

"The question seems to be which is more psychologically probable, the claim that the doctor's physician's conversation is premeditation to hide a contemplated crime or whether it is a frenzy of fright over his wife's suicide he would do all things.

"Another case was that of a woman, also of the upper social circles, charged with murder. She confessed that an adjoining of hers had married him and two weeks later denied this confession in toto. Counsel asked me to testify as an expert opinion by a psychological expert could be determined whether or not a confession was found a mind which could have committed the crime. I refused, saying it would be impossible for her to confess to the police against her best interests. While my testimony did not say so, most of his audience inferred that I had been asked to testify in favor of the young Delorey, who has repudiated his confession.

Professor Munsterberg said he had been able to read the mind of a young man who had forged his father's name on a check, as though the subject had written his thoughts on paper. Professor Munsterberg said:

Finds Youth a Forger.

"The young fellow, a decent chap, of good family, came to me in the greatest mental distress. I told him I would put him through a test to determine his mental capabilities. I then gave him a list of words, asking him to make instant reply to each word suggested a thought to him. When I had given him sixty words I told him quietly to go home and write out to his father that he had forged his name to a check and had used the money for a particular purpose which I mentioned to him.

"He was astounded and almost collapsed. He could not imagine how I had learned his difficulty.

"The word money had given me my first clew. Up to that word his responses to me he had answered me in from one to one and a half seconds. When I said 'Money' the time of his answer was three seconds.

"'Check' I said. This time three seconds and a half. 'Check' 'Forgery' I repeated. More delay.

"'Father' I said. This caused him great distress. That was the storm center of it all. The young man understood that I was right in every detail and that he lived in great fear of his father.

"Public Cannot Understand."

Professor Munsterberg's address kept his audience enthralled. Later he seemed much annoyed when he found that a reporter was present. He declined to discuss the subject when asked to further explain his view of the most public interest in the present murder trials.

"The public has had its interesting say for the public," he said. "The public cannot understand these things. I would not have consented to make an address to the Lynn Club if I knew it would be. It is a matter offered to the public. You must excuse me. I have nothing to say for the public. This is a subject to be discussed only before and by people capable of understanding it. I can discuss some small part of the underlying principles."

A Sallow, Pimply or "Muddy" Complexion

Is Easily Gotten Rid Of When Constitutional, Instead of Local, Treatment Is Taken.

Every woman strives to require and preserve a clear, fruitless, rose-and-lily complexion. This is apparently the height of the feminine ambition. No more fallacious epigram was ever penned than the one which says that beauty is the only skin deep, and no greater mistake can possibly be made in endeavoring to gain a clear, pretty complexion, entirely free from pimples, blackheads or other ugly blemishes, than the use of cosmetics, powders, lemon juice, cold cream, electric massage, and various other ointments, which aim at the complexion alone, and have no effect whatever on the blood or on the constitutional system.

Whenever you see a person with a clear, flawless complexion, you may be assured that its perfection depends not on the local application of any of many fad treatments on the market, but exclusively upon a pure, wholesome condition of the blood and upon its active, vigorous circulation through the skin.

It is the blood which gives the skin its rosy color, and although electric massage and other local treatments may draw the blood temporarily to the surface of the skin, it cannot leave it there. Only a strong circulation can do that. When the blood becomes impoverished and the circulation sluggish, the complexion, as a natural sequence, becomes sallow or "muddy," and pimples, blackheads, liver spots and other skin troubles put in their appearance.

One box of STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS, which are taken internally, will do the complexion more good than all the cosmetics, beauty powders, cold cream, electric and facial massage will do in a lifetime. These powerful little wafers cure because they strike at the root of the trouble. They purify and renovate the blood so completely that the complexion cannot do other than become clear, flawless and free from all skin blemishes.

Besides relieving the system of every particle of impurity, and thereby cutting off the source of the skin diseases, they also build up the blood, greatly increasing the number of red corpuscles in its current, and invigorating, strengthening and improving the circulation so decidedly that in a wonderfully brief period the cheeks become rosy, the complexion clear, the eyes bright, and the whole system glows with renewed life and vigor.

Secure a package of this blood-cleansing, complexion-clearing and system-renovating remedy from your druggist for 50 cents, and begin the treatment at once. Also send us your name and address and free sample package will be sent you. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FAITH IN YALE IS STILL STRONG, SAYS COACH JONES

MY faith in the Yale team is still strong. Princeton fought a dogged game, but I had faith that Yale would win. All the Yale men came through in first-class condition, excepting the slight injuries to Vaughan and Daly.

"ARMY" WILL DEFY O'MEARA'S POLICE IN TEST CASE

"We'll Go to Jail, but Will Hold Street Meetings," Says Colonel Gifford.

THAT the Salvation Army in Boston will hold its meetings in the streets as it formerly did and take up collections without permission of William H. Dowden, chairman of the Overseers of the Poor, or of Stephen O'Meara, commissioner of Police, was declared last night by Colonel Adam Gifford, head of the Army in Boston.

Colonel Gifford said further that no effort will be made this year to change the manner of taking the collection for the Thanksgiving Day and Christmas dinners but that the solicitors will continue to stand in prominent places, as they have done in the past, for the benefit of the Salvation Army. The other collection will be take for the poor and for their benefit alone.

Fight for Principle.

"On Monday I will send back to Overseer Fowler my permit to hold the 1910 to 1911 year regular street meetings. We will hold these meetings and take up collections irrespective of him and his regulations. If any Salvation Army member is arrested for taking up collections on the streets he will be instituted. If any member are arrested I will bail him out. If they fine him I will pay no fines, they will furnish no bail. A stand will be taken on principle. We received a six-page epistle from the law firm of Sohier & Whitman telling us our rights in this matter. I have sent copies of this opinion to both Mr. Fowler and to Commissioner O'Meara.

Blow at the Poor.

"The interference by the Overseers of the Poor with our customary street collections for Thanksgiving and Christmas have been a blow at the poor who alone have benefited by this work."

"Very well, if they want to test the law," replied Chairman Fowler. "If they insist on being arrested I guess Commissioner O'Meara will accommodate them.

"The thing which really seems to be them most in real matter of the law because I understand that they make a return to the city of a statement of how much money they get from the public. That's where the real trouble with the Salvation Army seems to be that it wants special privileges."

In a letter to the Overseers of the Poor Colonel Gifford says:

Books Open to Board.

"We are at all times ready to give the contributing public exact information and to render your board exact accounts of money received, but when you ask us to make it a permanent record open to the inspection of we know not whom, set peculiar and unprecedented marks and through channels other than those provided by your bureau, and ask us to give you the names of the unfortunates assisted, we think we are going further than you have any right."

MRS. HAMMERSTEIN LOSES.

Impresario's Wife Denied Discharge in Bankruptcy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Mrs. Malvina Hammerstein, wife of Oscar Hammerstein, the impresario, was to-day denied a discharge in bankruptcy by Judge Holt in the United States District Court. The action was due to the objection of the Twelfth Ward bank, which on May 31 last secured the judgments for $15,353 against Mrs. Hammerstein.

The voluntary petition, filed by Mrs. Hammerstein, showed liabilities of $20,000, of judgments secured against her as the endorser of notes made by her husband.

Loyal Briton Protests.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The Department of Justice to-day received a complaint from Edward L. McKenzie of Plainfield, N. J., protesting against the police action, in fact, every big port of entry.

The case is pending the case against its Tobacco Trust which has some close connection, it is said with the Sugar Trust.

LITTLE GIRL DIES OF MATCH BURNS

Grandmother Severely Injured in Attempting to Save Child and Brother.

PLAYING with matches while her mother was at the store buying the family dinner, cost the life of little Lillian May V. Clark, two years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Clark, of No. 16 Whitfield street, Dorchester, late yesterday. Her grandmother, Mrs. Mary A. Clark, who tried to save the child by carrying her out into the street while her flames spread to her own clothing, is in a serious condition at her home. Her arms were severely burned and the shock caused her great suffering.

Little Lillian was left at home in the grandmother's care and was almost alone to play with her brother, Frank, not much older than herself. When the grandmother came down stairs for a moment, leaving the child with the baby, she had not been gone a minute when the child's screams made her hasten down stairs. She found Lillian a mass of flames.

The child had found a box of parlor matches and playing with them, setting fire to her dress. The elderly woman seized the child and rushed with her to the street. A passing teamster stopped and threw a blanket around the child, but there was little chance for the child's life. She was taken to the City Hospital where she died a short while after being admitted.

TAFT REGIME IS THE BUSIEST EVER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—More things are doing under President Taft's administration at one time than under any other administration, before or since Washington's time, it is settled with a nod the long standing question where the Pardie case was brought in, and Mr. Pinchon's case, in fact, every big port of entry.

At Richmond he settled the eternal question of naval reorganization by approving the beautiful Secretary Meyer. When out West he approved the re-appointment of Francis J. Heney to push his land fraud cases in Oregon. At a conference in Washington, President urged the fullest inquiry into custom frauds so that the dregsest has been thrown over Boston, New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco and

DRUNKENNESS CURE MADE BY LIQUID PUT IN ARM

Lynn Man to Demonstrate on Wednesday He Can Stop Craving for Liquor.

A [illegible] drunkenness, a specific which [illegible] claims will not only [illegible] the mental and physical [illegible] of the confirmed drunkard but also [illegible] for the liquor habit, [illegible] Lynn man [illegible] tried the remedy [illegible] work in remarkable [illegible] B. Mulready, proba[illegible] the best known workers [illegible] cases in Boston, saw the remedy applied and declares that temporarily at least, it cured the difficult case.

Dr. George W. Galvin says the remedy works wonders and, though not yet convinced that the cures are permanent, he is eager to try the remedy on a patient as soon as possible.

On Wednesday morning there will be a demonstration of the effectiveness of the new treatment at Dr. Galvin's office at No 264 West Newton street. Medical experts and newspaper men will be called in to see how the treatment works on a man who is a confirmed drunkard.

Dr. Galvin [illegible] the remedy, will administer the treatment. As a contest is held in his ability to cure drunkenness that he declares positively that he expected the man to be sober in less than two hours and normally cured within a week. The treatment is painless, consisting of the injection of fluid into the arm of the patient and a further treatment at home or in a hospital.

Oxygen Basic Element.

"The fundamental principle of my cure," said Dr. Brownell, is the fact that the liquor habit is handled as a disease. The incessant craving for anything, without regard to consequences, is without question a condition for the physician to handle rather than a state of wilful badness, as some have asserted it. There is nothing wilful about it. Its great evil is the lack of ability to will anything.

"When a patient comes to a physician or to me for treatment, being for a short time in his right mind, we can give him this specific with his knowledge and consent.

"The result is wonderful. Oxygen is the basic element of the cure. Within a few [illegible] the need the man who is treated [illegible] what his previous condition, [illegible] senses and often his ability [illegible] walk and talk intelligently.

JORDAN IS ONE STEP NEARER DEATH FOR KILLING WIFE

Judges Deny Motion for New Trial on Ground That Juror White Was Insane.

THE first battle to save Chester S. Jordan from the death chair for the murder of his wife, Honora, since his conviction in the East Cambridge court, has been lost. The motion for a new trial on the ground that Willis A. White, foreman of the jury that convicted him, was insane at the time of the trial, was decided [illegible] a decision made [illegible] by Judge Stevens and Bell.

About 8 o'clock last night Phineas Jordan, father of the man condemned to death, and his brother-in-law, Frederick C. Kendall of Somerville, carried the news of the Court's decision against him to the East Cambridge jail.

"Chester was absolutely indifferent when we told him," said Mr. Kendall. "He just sat back, smiled quietly at us and changed the conversation."

Father Is Grief-Stricken.

The unhappy father was infinitely more affected and declined to say a word about what he hopes to do now. His face grew red and he was pale as he came out of the prison. An attendant said that Jordan [illegible] would [illegible] but [illegible] keep as soon as his relatives had left the prison.

Jordan's counsel declared yesterday that they will appeal the case to the Supreme Court of the State, and then if need be to the Supreme court of the United States. The fact that they introduced personal pictures of Jordan's wife in the case will be used as an [illegible] to a new trial.

Jordan is the brother-in-law of Jesse L. Livermore, the former wealthy cotton broker of New York. Livermore and his wife have both stood by Jordan financially and it is believed that the broker's fortune, estimated at [illegible] has been injured by the [illegible] he is making to save the young man from execution.

The Decision of the Court.

The finding of the judges as to Jordan White was as follows:

We find [illegible] a fair preponderance of all evidence [illegible] that the juror Willis A. White was of sufficient mental capacity during the entire trial of Chester S. Jordan [illegible] to render his verdict was returned to in exercise of his own [illegible] judgment, [illegible] of counsel, the rulings of law [illegible] charge of the court and to participate [illegible] deliberations of the jury, and we deny the motion for a new trial.

Having [illegible] the case we deny the motion [illegible] the request for [illegible]

WILLIAM B. STEVENS.
CHARLES J. BELL.

Harvey H. Brown, who with General Charles W. Bartlett acted as counsel for Jordan, said last night:

We will [illegible] the case and [illegible] Jordan [illegible] to the Supreme Court of Massachusetts [illegible] before the Supreme Court of the United States. There is a constitutional question involved that gives us the right, it need say, to go up to the highest court in the land.

And if we need it, we will. We will exhaust every legal resource to save Jordan."

Jordan Caught With Body.

The murder of young Mrs Jordan was particularly atrocious. It was learned that Jordan choked her, fractured her skull, cut her throat and then dismembered her body in [illegible] manner.

[illegible] declared that [illegible] quarrelled and he [illegible] her. [illegible] a moving [illegible] and [illegible] he [illegible] until he found [illegible] the next day. Since the trial White, the juror [illegible] said [illegible] in an affidavit [illegible] Jordan's lawyers argued that he was [illegible] incapable of rendering a just verdict and made a plea for their client on [illegible]

The [illegible] will be argued [illegible] Stevens and Bell to-day [illegible] seen at the trial. They will [illegible] before the Supreme Court in [illegible] a new trial [illegible] these exceptions. Twenty of the exceptions [illegible] Bell's charge to the jury and [illegible] rulings made during the trial.

Exhibits Were Refused.

Jordan's lawyers made thirty-[illegible] requests for particular instructions [illegible] jury in the charge to be delivered [illegible] Judge Bell, but only eighteen of [illegible] were touched upon by him. [illegible] [illegible] with the refusal of the Government [illegible] to admit [illegible] of the body of [illegible] and [illegible] the refusal of the Government [illegible] to give the confession of Jordan after [illegible]

UNUSUAL PHASES REVEALED IN TRIAL OF BOYS ACCUSED OF KILLING ANNIE MULLINS

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

THE legal fight that has been going on in the last days of the trial of Peter Piper and Thomas Doherty from the start of the case for the alleged murder of Annie Mullins, has been rather quiet and free from the sensational events that have developed many of the most exciting scenes of any criminal case in New England in many years.

Into the trial has crept an element of hypnotic suggestion such as Hugo Munsterberg warned the public against in just such cases, declaring that an accused man under the mysterious influence of this occult power could be led to confess a crime that he never committed.

Dr. Munsterberg, in answer to questions put to him by Attorney General Atwill, the prosecuting officer of the state, declared that Mrs. Annie Mullins, mother of the murdered girl, was a victim of hypnotic suggestion, and that she, without knowing it, had been led to do with the prisoners in the dock something that would have put the noose around their necks.

Dr. Munsterberg's theory was that Mrs. Mullins, in the excitement of the moment, had been led into the presence of the prisoners by the detectives and police officers who had been in charge of the case, and that she had been led to identify them as the murderers in the belief that they were guilty. Dr. Munsterberg declared that Mrs. Mullins had been led to confess a crime that she never committed.

Dr. Munsterberg, in answer to questions put to him by Attorney General Atwill, declared that Mrs. Mullins was under the influence of hypnotic suggestion when she identified Piper and Doherty as the murderers of her daughter. Dr. Munsterberg declared that Mrs. Mullins was a victim of hypnotic suggestion when she identified Piper and Doherty as the murderers of her daughter. DEAR 10: A few days ago you made mention of the fact that Onerved Connelly was one of the few faithful followers who ran had Carson City. Do you know any of the circumstances connected with Mr Connolly's Western trip? If not, I might tip you off a good story about this celebrated character. Yours,
OLD SPORT

If Old Sport knows a little Onerved Connelly's record that one can I have heard about that Western trip he is at liberty to ship it to me, C O D. Here is the generally accepted version of that memorable pilgrimage to the West.

Onerved Connelly went to his reward, and the sad fact is that they have mourned to him. He was a champion fighter when champion fighters were scarce, and he was a champion fighter when champion fighters were plentiful. He was king of the laurel encircled brow, and he had a big wallet on his hip, he owned that wallet himself, and he had a right to do with it as he pleased. He pleased to buy a ticket to New York, and he pleased to ride in the big end of the car, and he pleased to have the whole Connolly war chest in the car.

Wouldn't Miss Big Fight.

When the big Connolly Tittsburgh battle was in preparation Connolly made up his mind that he would not miss that fight. When the fight special rolled out of Pittsburg there was Connolly aboard, and there was Onerved Connolly aboard who had to fit out and no Pullman reservation. It was Onerved Connolly's friends—and he had nerve enough to make friends with a brakeman who had to ride on the rear end of the train and cold him to the diner on the rear end of the train and cold him to the diner on the rear end of the train and cold him to the diner

NEW JERSEY LADS DOWN VERMONTERS

Outclassed Opponents in All Stages of Game, Winning by 22 to 6.

The strong New Jersey A. A. C. eleven sent the Vermont football chasers home from Franklin Field in Lancaster yesterday afternoon a sore-hearted, heart-broken bunch by the score of 22 to 6, on passing them in all departments of the game.

Two hundred rooters came from the New Jersey end with them brought a band of sixteen pieces, more Band Leader Sabritsky, and when they got hoarse from cheering, and lungs from pelting their hats in the air after every touch down they made the band work overtime.

Vermont tried hard, but it takes an awful lot of football power to down the New Jersey team.

The most effective thing was to the first half Campbell, being the individual star in starting for New Jersey, making the five touchdowns in his three minutes. Offer failing on two of the goals.

Vermont made the score in the first half. O'Donnell starting the ball on a fumble and running 25 yards with the entire New Jersey team down him for a score. White kicking the goal.

In the second half New Jersey and Vermont tried their utmost to overcome the other, several short gains being made for New Jersey, made their best score on a brilliant run through a broken field for 40 yards, after kicking the goal.

After the game the torturing of the cat Jackson formed in the football field and adjourned from the field to Lancaster, followed by an immense crowd.

PUTNAM HIGH ROLLER.

"Old Hoss" Shows Nettle in Old Colony Rolloff.

"Old Hoss" Putnam had his old-time speed and skill back with him in the alleys this week, and after a 10 months' layoff got a first prize with a 3 string total of 295. Putnam's total was 5 pins better than Lawrence Barnes' 290, and 8 better than Harding's 287, which was the second prize. Barnes' 290 and Putnam's 295 are the best 3 string totals rolled in the Old Colony Association this season. Barnes' 290 is also the best single string rolled in the league this season. These Men Freed Themselves From Wages and In One Brief Year Won Their Way to Absolute Independence

By CHARLES H. SIEG.

This Man Has Literally Caused Thousands of Northern City People to Become the Owners of Florida Farms and Has Made Them Happy, Contented and Independent. The Statements Below Are But a Few of the Many Instances of What Has Been Done by Mr. Sieg and His Associates During the Spring and Summer of 1909.

Joseph H. La Rue, Telegraph Operator, one of the most lovable men that ever lived; the head of a handsome family, and a man who earned from $40 to $50 a week as a special expert connected with the Chicago Board of Trade. Joe La Rue is a Mason and one of the best known in the North and Northwest. He has always given his family 90% of his effort, and every employer he ever had agreed that he was an able workman. The panic came, and Joe La Rue looked into the future with fear and trembling. His income was only sufficient to take care of the expense of his family; he was tired and sick of the struggle, of the 25 years of unceasing toil. He was heartsick, but plucky, and he would not give up. He read the announcement of our company a year ago, sent in $5.00, secured a farm, went to Florida, and within a year from that time we find Joe La Rue one of the most successful men in the Rainbow State. He owns 20 acres of glorious land, possesses a fine home, a yard full of chicken; has more money in the bank ten times over than when he lived in Chicago, and he is now independent of any man that lives. He says that the peace of mind, the pleasure and the joy he obtains every hour by having his family about him is more valuable to him than all of the riches in the world. To-day his wants are less than one-half of the possibilities of his income.

J. W. Card, Carpenter, of Chicago, never earned less than $25 to $35 per week. He tried to live well and gave the best he could to his wife and son. The labor troubles in Chicago cut his earning capacity in half; he was idle much of the time. He saw our announcement and went to Florida. To day he has 30 acres of our land and an orange grove 10 acres in extent. He is the agent for the great Armour Packing Company at St. John's Park; owns a half interest in a 22-foot launch, the fastest on Crescent Lake, which he built himself and which runs through the water at the rate of 25 miles an hour. He has a cozy home and money in the bank; he sleeps nights and fears nothing; but better than all this, he has the peace, pleasure and profit that comes to a man who is surrounded by his loved ones every hour of the day and sees that these loved ones have every comfort their heart can wish.

Harry Pedrick, Piano Expert, of Chicago, had always worked hard and supported his mother in comfort. He had no money and had to borrow the funds to go to Florida and take up his land, 10 acres, which our company sold to him at 50 cents per acre down, and 50 cents per acre per month. To-day he is independent and happy. He sleeps nights and knows just exactly where he is going to get his next meal; he has a fine home now and looks into the future with absolute assurance that hard times can never touch him or his family, and no employer can crush him or his mother.

Mrs. Lehman, of Chicago, saw our announcement a year ago and it interested her. She bought ten acres of land, paying $5 down and $5 a month, and shortly after left for Florida. She told her husband, "You stay here and hold your position for a year. I will go down with the girls and see that the ground is cleared and something started growing." Mrs. Lehman did this. This noble woman to-day has her farm paid for, and for that which cost her $300 she refused an offer of $1,000 in cash ten days ago, and rightly, too, because the independence she has achieved is worth even more than the money.

John Canham, Chicago. He has refused four times as much for his land as he paid for it. John Canham was simply an investor, but the work of others in developing this great property has benefited him immensely, as it has all others. He has not moved to his home yet, but is now building a $2,000 bungalow and will spend the winter with his family and friends enjoying the finest recreation and sport to be had right at his very door.

Hal Irish, of Michigan, sick unto death, fearing that he had cancer and almost a physical wreck, read our announcement about a year ago, and in the desire to go to that beautiful clime he bought a small farm, paying $5 down, and with his lovely wife and two beautiful little girls left for his new home. When we first saw him come into the office with the rest of the folks seeking our land, our first thought was where could we locate the graveyard, a matter that up to that time we never even dreamed of. Take the case of Hal Irish to-day. The first day he moved in he threw up a rough little shack—costing $110—and then he started to work on his palace, and it is one of the prettiest little houses one would desire. Dwellings can be erected cheaply in Florida, because lumber is inexpensive, and because the existing climate does not require the snug comfort necessary in the building of houses in the North. Since the completion of the palace of Mr. Irish, the original dwelling place has been turned into a chicken coop. Hal Irish has to-day recovered his health—he is as strong as an ox and has been one of the greatest successes of St. John's Park.

A. H. Hotchkiss, of Oregon, saw our announcement less than a year ago. He bought forty acres of land at $20 an acre, and shipped his horses and his farming implements, and brought one of his friends with him from the far West. He has built a $2,000 home on this land and is now living there with his good wife. You could not buy what Mr. Hotchkiss owns to-day for $10,000. He always was a good natured, hard working chap, but was not looking for the best of it from anyone. He is happy here and he has good reason to feel that way. We have had eight orders from Mr. Hotchkiss for farms, for his friends, come into this office that we could not fill until recently.

John Van Pearse, of Indiana, saw our announcement and bought a forty-acre farm at St. John's Park. He is now there with his wife and her mother, and is arranging to build a beautiful home. He has been pleased with what he has seen and is a practical man and knows the situation. Mr. Van Pearse would not to-day take three times the amount for his investment.

These people can have wild turkey, quail and ducks all winter, and if they desire fish the rivers and creeks of Florida fairly teem with the gamest of all finny tribes.

[illegible] the soil, climate and sunshine, the balmy breezes—all tend to give man, in exchange for a little effort, a bountiful supply of vegetables and fruit. These are the same kind of vegetables that one will find at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel; aboard our great steamships and dining cars; in our fanciest and most famous restaurants; displayed in the finest grocery stores and supply depots of the North and East. To eat a meal in Florida, any season of the year, is to get a glimpse at the real value of perfect food. Such supplies as these cost the land owner practically nothing and he can grow three crops of vegetables every year.

Many of the settlers who purchased from us last year have built the most beautiful homes. The building of such homes and the improvement of that land has increased the value of all land surrounding it, so that those who purchased for investment "one now see their judgment realized, for they could sell their land at many times the price they paid for it.

These instances we can duplicate by the score from actual letters on file in our office and you may talk with many such people in either of our two colonies, not on one acre of which we have left. It is sufficient to say that the land we are now offering for sale is the equal of, and in many instances is superior to, the land which was purchased by the above named persons. Surely what they can do, you can do, for these people were not experienced farmers, and all they know of Florida has been taught them within the past few months.

Letters from Prominent Officials and Influential Citizens of Ocala, Marion County, Florida.

The Mayor of Ocala Says:

"I am familiar with the beautiful Burbank-Ocala tract of land near Ocala. Have been over it for years. As a whole, it is unexcelled in Florida for general farming, trucking, etc. Ocala stands ready to extend the hand of welcome to your settler."

J. D. ROBERTSON,
Mayor of the City of Ocala.

The Postmaster of Ocala Says:

"O ala is kind to have the eyes of the North turned her way. She has nothing to be ashamed of. The magnificent farm proposition that you are offering Northern settlers will do wonders toward building up quickly this locality."

CEO. C. CROM, Postmaster.
Ocala, Florida, October 11, 1909.
Mr. Charles H. Sieg,
Chicago, Ill.

A County Judge Writes:

Dear Sir:—

Replying to your recent inquiry as to the character of the lands in the vicinity of Ft. McCoy and Daisy, Marion County, Florida, will say that I am well acquainted with that section of our County and I believe that in that section will be found some of the best lands for agricultural purposes that are to be found in our State, and the general health of the inhabitants of that section has always been good.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH BELL,
County Judge.

Office of
Board of Public Instruction
Marion County, Florida
Ocala, Florida, Nov. 11, 1909

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to say that I am personally acquainted with the section of country in the neighborhood of Fort McCoy, in this county, and I know the section to be splendidly adapted to general and truck farming. It is mostly what we know as "flat woods" and is fertile and responds well to cultivation. The section is generally healthful and is already sparsely settled with very agreeable people. I am pleased in that section myself and feel no hesitation in recommending it to a prospective settler. Very truly yours,

J. H. BRINSON,
Superintendent of Education.

A Leading Real Estate Man Says:

"In arranging with your Company for the large body of land controlled by me for many years past, I want to state that your plan for settling up this district with good, thrifty men and women, and my knowledge of your responsibility, form the only reason why I have turned over to you what I consider to be one of the most fertile and certainly one of the most beautiful farming districts in America. Anyone who is willing to put in his time can make from three to five times as much here in a year on ten acres of land as he would on one hundred in the North. When this truth is more generally appreciated, there will be less good land for sale in Florida."

FRANCIS J. O'HARA, Ocala, Fla.

A Railroad President Says:

"That beautiful tract of land known as the Ocala-Burbank tract and owned by me for many years. I have operated and still am operating a number of very large saw mills, cleaning off the heavy timber on the northern end of the tract. In my opinion this is one of the finest bodies of farm land in America. The Ocala Northern Railroad, of which I am president, runs throughout this entire tract for a distance of twenty-five miles. My company will do everything in its power to assist your settlers and heartily welcome them as neighbors in this splendid farming country.

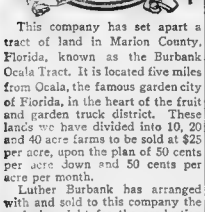
E. P. HENTZ, Pres."

A Leading Banker Says:

"I have been engaged in banking in Ocala for fifteen years and have in cultivation more than 1,000 acres of farm land, the development of which has been a financial success. I am well acquainted with the Burbank-Ocala tract near Ocala and regard the land of it as the best farm land [illegible]

W. G. CHAMBLISS,
Vice-President the Munroe & Chamblies Bank,
Ocala, Florida."

EVERY WORD A FACT



This company has set apart a tract of land in Marion County, Florida, known as the Burbank Ocala Tract. It is located five miles from Ocala, the famous garden city of Florida, in the heart of the fruit and garden truck district. These lands we have divided into 10, 20 and 40 acre farms to be sold at $25 per acre, upon the plan of 50 cents per acre down and 50 cents per acre per month.

Luther Burbank has arranged with and sold to this company the exclusive right for the production of certain of his farm products.

On this land we will install the great Burbank Producing Station, whose director will be Frederick W. Malley, the greatest agriculturist in America, a man whose recognition for merit has been acknowledged by many States and who has been sought by Secretary Wilson, head of the United States Department of Agriculture, on special expert matters.

From this producing station we shall send forth the great products of Burbank to all the world. Our colonists will receive the seeds and plants first and will share in the profits of this producing station.

Mr. Malley will be available for your needs. To-day, right on the ground, there is a corps of men, from whom you can arrange for all your desires in the matter of starting your home.

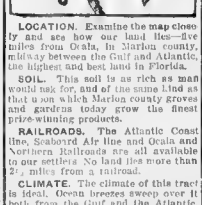
You can meet our experts, talk with the colonists or some of them that we located earlier in the year, and on the whole you can be fully convinced of the value of a home here.

Our own saw mills will furnish your lumber for home purposes at a fractional part of northern cost.

Get out of a Pullman car into your land. Use a local or long-distance telephone, have your daily paper, rural delivery and all the comforts of home.

Reserve a farm now. If you are dissatisfied after purchasing it in accordance with the terms of our contract we will refund every dollar you have paid.

Don't delay—send in your application now, as per terms below. If you want more information, send us the Free Book of Proof coupon.



LOCATION. Examine the map closely and see how our land lies—five miles from Ocala, in Marion county, midway between the Gulf and Atlantic, the highest and best land in Florida.

SOIL. This soil is as rich as man would ask for, and of the same kind as that upon which Marion county groves and gardens today grow the finest prize-winning products.

RAILROADS. The Atlantic Coast line, Seaboard Air line and Ocala and Northern Railroads are all available to our settlers. No land is more than 2½ miles from a railroad.

CLIMATE. The climate of this tract is ideal. Ocean breezes sweep over it both from the Gulf and the Atlantic. Sunstrokes are unknown, 63 degrees being the annual average temperature.

SCHOOLS. Marion county has fine schools and enjoys exceptional educational advantages for the youth or child

TAXES. The taxes will all be paid by this company until deed is delivered to you

MARKETS. Every market of the North, East and West is reached by fast refrigerator car service. Commission men and fruit buyers visit this county each season and buy its crops for cash.

WARRANTY DEED FOR TITLE We give a full and complete warranty deed for title to your farm.

3 CROPS A YEAR That is what one can do on the land of our colonists. Corn raised for its roasting ears, and a spring crop and fancy fruits and vegetables, and has enjoyed a reputation for 25 years, thus showing the freedom of crop failure and long frosts.

Read This and Shake Off the Shackles

If you are a wage earner, one of the vast army who, from the contact of things pulls the earth on, and in exchange for your vitality, brain and brawn you receive blows, hardship and unkindness—if you are a wage earner and in the whirlpool of life are clinging to the frail support of some employer, and if, as you look out upon the future the way seems harder and the heights more distant, I say to you now, read and believe.

For the man who makes so-called fair wages today there is little left when his living has been paid for—$60 to $100 a month means a living—that is all. Three months of sickness means eighteen months of toil before you are on your feet once more.

If you are one of these men and women you will know what I say is true; it is to you that I am talking. I want to open to you the vista of Florida, independence, health, happiness and forever mental vacation.

Florida, that glorious state where sky and stream, landscape and foliage, bear every color of the rainbow, in a ceaseless changing of tints. Florida will welcome you and your family and will go farther and do more than any other state in the Union.

Florida is the God given land where every essence of Nature has been distilled to meet the greatest requirements of mankind; her inexhaustible soil; her air, her profound and generous rainfall; her resources of rich productiveness; her natural resources, her geographical perfection; her proximity to the throbbing and pulsating centres and the highways of human travel all and every attribute points to and proves Florida to be the choicest spot in all the world

This Company has selected in the heart of Florida's garden section, upon the highest and most picturesque ridge in the state, a tract of land where we are locating the hundreds of people who are applying for farms in our great colonies.

We intend to stand back of our colonists and to do those things that build communities and make home life in Florida not an existence of drudgery but a pleasurable and happy life.

Toward this end we have purchased the rights to certain of Luther Burbank's great farm products his thornless cactus, which, when grown upon Florida land, will produce hundreds of dollars' worth of profit per acre, and ever acre of this great product will have a ready and eager market; the great Burbank potato, which defies all competition and which doubles the earning capacity of an acre, besides greatly lessening the cost of production

There are other products, too, which will be grown, produced and sold to the world from our immense Burbank producing station, which has been built by this company and located on land selected after a careful search for the kind of soil best adapted and advised by Luther Burbank, the world's greatest horticulturist.

The purchaser of one of our farms will receive a Burbank certificate, which permits him a share in the profits of this great producing station. He receives the seeds and roots grown at our Burbank station, and has the expert advice always at hand of Fred. W. Malley, the greatest and most practical and scientific agriculturist expert in America. Mr. Malley has a reputation all over the United States and has been the means of many reforms in intensive and modern farming, and especially chosen by the U. S. Department of Agriculture on a matter of great moment to the South.

We intend to have our own sawmill on the ground in the spring, so that our colonists can secure their building material right at their door for a fractional cost of Northern lumber prices

Our corps of colony supervisors are now on our land, ready and will be for ever all the assistance necessary to those desiring to locate now

If you are not ready to go on our land at this time my advice to you is to buy for investment

This land, now selling at $25 per acre, will before your payments have been completed be so greatly improved by those who are now locating and arranging to locate there, that you will have many opportunities to sell your farm at a great profit. Don't sell now. Keep it and go there and live. You can raise many plant crops on land, but there is only one crop of soil, and within a few months all actual Florida land will be in the hands of gentle bodies of capital, who today are investing heavily in Florida farms. These rich men know what is coming, and they are taking time by the forelock and cornering the land that should be purchased by the ordinary man now

Let these brief points sink deep into your mind. You know I am telling you facts, and if you will but be the judge and search for the facts yourself you will see what I am unable to prove to you through cold printed words.

Every man and woman who wants to place behind him or her the yoke and its callous, who wants to feel in themselves the breath of freedom, who wants to rear their young in a healthful existence where sons are killed and bodies warped, who want to put in the 800,000,000 long cells of the human body oxygen, purer and unclouded, then I say, read this announcement, and after you have read it, make up your mind, now, that you will not live another year as you have lived the one just past.

On this page I have shown you what we have done for others. I ask you to believe in us—to believe in yourself—in your instinct. I want you to send in your application and remember that I tell you that if for any reason you are dissatisfied, your money will be returned. Five dollars down now and $5.00 per month or at the rate of 50 cents per acre per month, will buy you a ten acre farm, and so on up to 40 acres—the maximum amount that we desire to sell to any one person. Our contract is most liberal. It provides for sickness; it protects the heirs of the purchaser who dies before he has made all of his payments. We want success and ability, and for such we will exchange every courtesy in our power, stand back of such people, as far as it is possible for one man to assist another. We will hide nothing or in any way do aught but that which will help build up this great colony to equal the two communities which we successfully exploited the year of 1909.

My advice to you is to send the application for purchase below. But if you cannot do this now, write immediately for our free literature and explanatory information and data

NOW DE CASTELLANE STIRS UP PARIS BY HIS FRANK MEMOIRS

He Is Threatened With Duel by Angry Bonapartists for Telling a Eugenie Story,

FIERY LIFE OF SPIRIDOVICH

The Marquis Warmly Praises the Charitable Work of Americans in France.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE,

Special Correspondent of Boston American.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Paris society is in a ferment at present. Everybody is talking about my memoirs, which are to be published in Paris next week. Some of the stories I have told are very much altered from the original versions, and I am sure that I shall be challenged to fight a number of duels. I am prepared to meet my opponents, and I do not think that I shall be killed.

In my own justification I wish to say that there is nothing scandalous in my memoirs. They are entirely unlike those of the Countess de Cardigan which do not hesitate to reveal the immorality of the virtuous Victorian era. So far from it, I am surprised to hear that there are a few people who seem to think that I have been indiscreet. I am surprised to hear that some of my friends are afraid that I have said too much about them. I am surprised to hear that I am going to be called upon to fight a duel by the defenders of the memory of beautiful Eugenie de Montijo.

It seems that this lady, then Empress of the French, once visited the house of the great courtesan Marguerite Belanger at Enghien and there met Spiridovich, who won the favor of the Emperor Napoleon III and Eugenie was jealous and alarmed. Napoleon's health was failing rapidly at the time. The life of pleasure which he was leading was exceedingly dangerous for him. All appeals to his reason were fruitless. In desperation Eugenie finally swallowed her pride and sent a proud, this beautiful woman—and were finally into the house of the fascinating Marguerite, her rival.

What passed between the two women so far removed from each other in the social scale I do not know. What I do know is, that the fact of the midnight visit became known and raised a storm of criticism and scandal throughout Paris.

This is the simple truth. The Bonapartists need not challenge me to a duel because I have told it. There are worse things to be said of women. And Eugenie was certainly a devoted wife. If she was a jealous one, well, I fancy she had good reason.

More Light on Daring Career of Spiridovich.

The career of daring and danger pursued by General Arthur Tcherup Spiridovich, who he insists that he will marry Mrs. William Hays Chapman of New York, is perhaps not fully known in America.

It is said that a telegram from him to Grand Duke Sergius to the effect that England and Japan caused the revolution in Russia, was responsible for the assassination of the Grand Duke by the Anarchists. Spiridovich himself narrowly escaped to a similar fate, but he fled to Macedonia.

It was by threatening revolt of the Slavic Catholics (especially the faithful Poles) against the Church, that he prevented the Pope from proclaiming the Emperor of Germany Protector of the Catholics in the Orient. Spiridovich was able to do this in his capacity as president of the Slavic Societies.

Again his hand apeared in the overthrow of the Sultan. The revolutionary movement in the Armenian provinces and Macedonians were stirred up and marshalled by him. This strong co-operation with the Young Turks enabled him to dethrone the Sultan and grasp the power. Much of their success is due to the powerful aid of Spiridovich.

Now he aims at uniting two hundred million Slavs.

Mrs. Chapman will certainly not be wanting in courage to stand by her lion with such a fiery and adventurous knight.

Good Work Done by Charitable Americans.

The recent inauguration of the new American Hospital here, the president of which is the well known banker, John R. Marjes, calls attention to the many benevolent works due to Americans in the city of Paris. It may interest readers to know some of these.

After the aforesaid hospital is the hospital built by William K. Vanderbilt and his charming wife, devoted especially to the cure of poor people suffering from rheumatism. So long important is the Miller-Gould Hall, built by Anna Gould, the present Princess de Sagan, as a memorial to her parents, George Jay Gould. This is targood, and there can never be any repetition of that horrible catastrophe of the Bazaar de la Charite, which over a hundred of our noble and charitable ladies were burned to death.

The donation of over five hundred thousand francs by Mr. James Hazen Hyde, the word famed Ecole des Beaux Arts, is a practical recognition of what America owes to our Academy of Fine Arts. The American Art Association owes much of its success also to the sustaining hand of Edmund Wanamaker.

Then there is the American Girls' Home, founded by Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, wife of the American ambassador to Great Britain. Women's Christian Association, founded by Mrs. Whitney Soft, daughter of the late Commodore Whitney of Detroit.

These are only a few of the good works which Paris owes to the charity and generosity of Americans.

SOME OF THE ROYAL HEIRS WHO ONE DAY WILL BE RULERS OF EUROPE

The seven royal personages shown in this picture will in process of time, barring death, disaster and dissolution of monarchies, reign over the seven great nations of Germany, Russia, England, Italy, Spain, Norway and Holland. They will be the rulers of 665,000,000 of people and will hold the destinies of the Old World and of unnumbered islands of the seas in their hands. Some of them are mere children, and an extremely interesting article on these "Children Who Will Be Kings" appears in the December Cosmopolitan.

SEEK OUT FUTURE QUEEN OF PORTUGAL

Court Circles Greatly Agitated Over King Manuel's Matrimonial Plans.

By A. J. LAMBERT,

Special Correspondent Boston American.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—There is great agitation in court circles with regard to King Manuel's matrimonial plans. It is an open secret that Princess Alexandra, the eldest daughter of the Princess Royal, was several times ago as the bride, but all sorts of difficulties have arisen and no announcement will be made until the King returns to Lisbon. The chief difficulty lies in the objection of Princess Alexandra herself who is thoroughly disheartened by the experiences Queen Elizabeth had and therefore does not wish to become Queen of Portugal. She prefers to marry an English nobleman. Her mother is equally opposed to the match but King Edward insists it is necessary to spread English influence throughout the courts of Europe and he is impressing the Princess with the view that it is not duty to marry King Manuel.

The Princess will be given time to overlook King Manuel and if she does himself maybe her sense of duty will lead her to marry him. If he proves repugnant the King will permit her to marry an English nobleman and on this line he is putting the Marquis of Stafford, heir to the Duke of Sutherland on the hook and getting him as a second string to the matrimonial plans. The Marquis of Stafford becomes one of the greatest landowners in England and the Princess royal would prefer him for a son in law to King Manuel. The young Marquis, however, probably will have something to say about these love affairs as he is deparately enamored of Lady Majorie Manners, daughter of the Duke of Rutland.

His father, the Duke of Sutherland, doesn't like a match of this character, particularly on account of the Duchess Rutlands leadership of "Souls and Lady Majorie's unconventional proclivities. Meanwhile the Princess Alexandra is supposed not to have any say about her own matrimonial arrangements.

IS REAL PRINCESS.

Bride of Braganza Not a "Morganatic Wife."

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Duke of Braganza's marriage to Miss Anita Stewart has been described hitherto as morganatic. This now is stated to have been a mistake. Morganatic marriages are unknown outside the Germanic (in the wider sense) reigning or mediatized families and royal houses whose family traditions have become Germanized, as Russia and Sweden. No such rule seems to have been accepted by Portugal or Spain. The house of Braganza merely was a ducal house illegitimately descended from the Portuguese King John the First, who himself was born out of wedlock. Since then kings in Portugal in practice always have married royal princesses, but there is no reason beyond policy why they should, and there is no legal ground debarring the off-spring of Dom Miguel from succession to the throne, and family arrangements to the contrary notwithstanding.

FRENCH GIRLS ATHLETES.

American Invasion Has Changed Mode of Living.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—In the process of Americanization which is affecting the younger generation of Parisians, no feature is more anomalous than the development of the French athletic girl. God made the Parisience charming, but hitherto she was never associated with the strenuous life.

Col. Fearing Fails to Win Back His Wife

She Decides That Their State of Separation Is Best for Both Parties.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Colonel George R. Fearing left the Hotel Majestic of Paris three weeks ago, having failed to effect a reconciliation with his wife. The trouble for which a solution was sought in the divorce courts, occurred nearly two years ago, and called the American then that Mrs. Fearing, who is no longer young, is more interested in music than matrimony. She is a woman of wide culture and extremely fond of the arts in which her husband takes no interest. She has long preferred to live in Paris, where she keeps two apartments which she rarely occupies, making her home at the Hotel Dieu. She leads a retired life and does not go into society. Her chief interests are charitable and she is always trying to do good, especially to young men and women seeking music. She is a subscriber for ten seats at the opera, which she gives to deserving students on condition that they promise never to see a performance of Gounod's "Faust," which is her especial detestation.

A year ago last Spring Colonel Fearing visited his wife in her apartments in the Avenue Victor Hugo, and since then Mrs. Fearing has invited freely to her friends of his actions on that occasion, saying that he acted very unlike an American. She declared that her husband found her French servants so attractive that she thought the best thing he could have was his freedom. Mrs. Fearing is a wealthy woman in her own right and says there is no financial disagreement.

MUSHROOMERS TO STRIKE.

Paris Growers of the Fungi Want Better Conditions.

PARIS Nov. 13.—The latest strike with which Paris is threatened is that of the mushroom men—that is to say, the laborers employed by the mushroom growers in Paris, who have formed a syndicate, whose first step is to discuss the advisability of a strike. Paris is a great centre of mushroom culture, as tourists known who are shown the old rats caves and underground galleries where these fungi are produced in large quantities. The mushroom gardeners declare they are kept at work from twelve to fifteen hours a day in damp, unhealthy, underground galleries like rabbit burrows, and have to go about mostly in a stooping, doubled up position, so much so that many of them lost the habit of walking erect for the rest of their lives.

Added to this hardship is the meagreness of their pay, which they want raised from fifty or sixty centimes to a minimum of seventy centimes per hour, and a limit of ten hours' work per day.

Spent Stepdaughter's Trust Fund of $375,000

Pavlowski, Lloyd's Agent Who Committed Suicide, Left Only $40,000 of the Fortune.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Nov. 13. A hasty audit of the tangled accounts of Rothus Pavlowski, the general agent of the North German Lloyd in Paris, who committed suicide in Bremen, has revealed his astonishing fatuity that out of a fortune of $375,000 left by William Parry, son of Parry of the Bald win Locomotive Works, to his daughter, Lord Baldwin Sutherland, only $40,000 remain. The wonder is expressed by those knowing the terms of the trust under which the money was left, is how Pavlowski was able to touch it. This is now explained.

Years ago Pavlowski his wife and stepdaughter went to America and persuaded the trustees to give him full power of attorney. He was thus enabled to use the money to negotiate securities as if it were his own. Although his wife and stepdaughter consented to the transfer, it is said that the courts here will be asked to decide whether the trust was legally broken.

The entire amount which Pavlowski squandered is now known to reach nearly a million dollars. To the Travelers that of Paris he made good his gambling debts to the amount of $50,000.

LAZIEST MAN ON EARTH.

Alexander Depau Refuses Work When Offered.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Described as "the laziest man on earth," Alexander Depau has been summoned at Tottenham for neglecting his three children, under sixteen years of age.

Mr. Windsor, prosecuting, said the defendant had been called "the laziest man on earth," and the term was not inappropriate. Work had been offered him, but he had refused it, spending most of his time in bed. His wife would drag him out of bed at the meeting to look for work, but he would return nothing. Various excuses—that he was too old, that he was too cold, that his clothing was not good enough, that he wanted new teeth and that he wanted a new wife. When his wife's black was turned he would crawl back into bed, and help himself to the children's food, and then he would creep back again.

Harvard House Gazette.

LONDON, Nov. 13. Harvard House, the resting place for American tourists at Stratford-on-Avon, which supplies a link between Shakespeare a birthplace and Harvard University, now has a journal of its own. The new publication, the first number of which has just been issued, is called Harvard House Gazette and American Visitor's Chronicle, a title which sufficiently explains its purpose.

PEERS SWEAR THEY WILL KILL BUDGET

Stead, However, Clings to Belief the King Will Straighten Out the Tangle.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Correspondent of Boston American

Special Cable to American.

LONDON, Nov. 13. The political barometer is not for "storm," the militant Lords swear to all their gods that they will reject the budget, and the eager Liberals [illegible] to the fray.

At the same I still venture to believe that when the Lords have passed their amendment the King will be able to induce [illegible] to accept it, whereupon the passing of the budget, to be followed by the dissolution in January. But it is only right to inform you that I am almost alone in my belief. The offers which the King already has made have somewhat disheartened him.

"The poor king" said a highly placed lady to me this week, "has done his best and can do no more."

Despite all this pervading pessimism I refuse to despair of the royal balance wheel of the constitution.

Compliments to Sir R. Perks.

Sir Robert Perks, the solitary Methodist member of the House, who has publicly proclaimed his hostility to the budget, is a very clever solicitor, but a very bad politician. The Methodists of this country as a body have always been [illegible] to the other Non-Conformists, and Perks is a [illegible] of Methodist. He "cried treason" Liberal leader, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman on the subject of the Boer war and threw in his lot with Lord Rosebery. He is violently prejudiced against the Catholics and was worse than lukewarm about Home Rule. He has no following in the House, and we are all glad he is going to retire from politics and devote himself to the Wesleyan Methodists' Thanksgiving fund and for having helped Charles Yerkes electrify London's underground railroad.

On the continent the play is still over cast.

Sinister rumors are in circulation as to attempts to assassinate the King of Spain in revenge for Ferrer's execution.

The Greek situation is no nearer settlement and the Turkish issue on the Cretan question does not throw oil on the troubled waters.

Stead's News from Russia.

From Russia I hear that Tschykowsky is to be brought to trial by the end of the month. It is reported that he will be tried behind closed doors, that he will not only be sentenced to Siberia. As to the plan of Russifying Finland, there is reason to believe that the design, if it has ever existed, of annexing Viborg, has been abandoned.

The Servant in the House" is not proving so popular in London as it was in New York, despite the excellence of the acting. There will be a private meeting on Sunday afternoon, to which many of the leading dramatists, critics and clerics have been invited, for the purpose of discussing how much further it is desirable to go in placing the person of Christ upon the modern stage. Next year the Oberammergau play will attract thousands to the Tyrol, but as yet the Passion Plays have not begun to make a tour of the world.

THOUGHT MIDGET BAD BOY.

London Policeman Arrests Prince Otto for Smoking Cigarettes.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A curious police mix-up in the Strand last night between Prince Otto, who is soon to appear in the Town and the Strand Hotel shows that the Prince is not to be taken as a [illegible] of the barber shops and bought some cigarettes. He left the store smoking whereupon the policeman noticing his diminutive size considered the cigarettes and threatened the dealer with prosecution under the new law making it an offense to sell tobacco to children under fourteen. The policeman took the midget to the station-house where the Prince was released and the policeman got the merry hahaha for his officiousness.

Ancient Town Found.

ROME, Nov. 13.—A prehistoric town, complete with streets, houses and temples, has been discovered in Sardinia by Professor Taramelle. It is reported to be surrounded by a wall of enormous size, more massive than any city wall known to exist in Europe.

HENRY VIGNAUD IS A 'DEVIL'S ADVOCATE'

Gets His Mediaeval Title for Having Opposed Putting Columbus With the Saints.

By VANCE THOMPSON

Special Correspondent of Boston American

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Nov. 13. Henry Vignaud, the venerable diplomatist who for thirty-five years was First Secretary of the American Embassy in Paris, has been denounced as "The Devil's Advocate."

The reason for this mediaeval denunciation is his opposition to the attempt to put Columbus in the calendar of saints. Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, backed by 2,000 Knights of Columbus in America, has petitioned the Holy See to canonize the discoverer of America. In addition Bishop James J. Keane of Wyoming headed a large pilgrimage of knights to personally urge Pope Pius X to favor the canonization of Columbus. Among other reasons he argued that there was not a single American saint in the calendar and that it would be some consolation if the discoverer of America were so honored.

Now, Henry Vignaud is recognized by the Vatican as the best and most learned historian of Columbus, so the Roman Congregation consulted him. He came out flat [illegible] against the canonization, saying that Columbus was anything but saintly, that his manners and morals were like those of any rough and ready sailor-man, with a wife in every port. He proved to the Roman Congregation that Christopher Columbus had at least one illegitimate son.

Why He Gets the Title.

This was denied by those who clamored for canonization, and thereupon Vignaud produced overwhelming proof that Columbus never married Beatrix Enriquez, mother of Fernando, his second son. Vignaud will devote a chapter in his forth coming book to this subject.

As Vignaud has been officially consulted, the venerable historian is now "The Devil's Advocate," this being the ecclesiastic name for the official whose business it is to raise objections to a candidate for canonization.

Saying the Romen, who was a belle in New York twenty years ago when Fred Gebhardt and Berry Wall were young and Ward McAllister ruled society, is still locked up in the prison Saint Louise for expelling peddlers. Her six children by her first husband, Von Berk, remained until Wednesday in a furnished house in the Avenue Kleber, which was taken by the so-called Count Cubera, whom their mother married six months ago. They were without friends and their very food was supplied by a servant who refused to desert them, aided by an old woman who sells newspapers near the house. No request for aid was made to the American Embassy until the agent of the house told the First Secretary that he must clear the house by Wednesday.

Children Safe at Last.

An attache of the embassy was sent to investigate the affair and had a long talk with the eldest daughter, aged sixteen. She seemed terrorized and refused to make any statement, even of her parentage, answering all questions. "You must ask mama."

Ultimately the attache learned that their father, Van Berk, in spite of his long residence in New York, never became an American citizen. The American agent would have paid out of his pockets for sending the children to New York, but he could not interfere under the circumstances.

W. B. Bloniter, agent for the property learned that the children's grandmother and grandfather, Van Berk were still living in Copenhagen, so telegraphed at once received there. On Monday the eldest [illegible] accompanied by a commissary of police, he took them to the station, bought tariff tickets and sent them to Denmark. Two years ago, when Von Berk died, his parents brought suit in New York to gain possession of the children, urging that their mother was an unfit person, but they lost their case.

Veteran Had 17 Wounds.

LONDON, Nov. 13. The funeral has taken place at East Ilsring Norfolk, of a Crimean veteran, James Ward, who was wounded in seventeen places at the siege of Sebastopol. Ward lay out in the open for two days before he was found. Several of his wounds were serious, and he was in a hospital for months before being sent home. He had drawn a pension for over fifty years.

MRS. J. J. ASTOR MAY LOSE ROYAL FAVOR IN ENGLAND DUE TO DIVORCE

King's Rules Close His Levees to House Whose Marital Troubles Reach a Court.

ASCOT ENCLOSURE BARRED

By CHARLES P NORCROSS

Special Correspondent of Box on American.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Nov. 13. There is much curiosity [illegible] exclusive English society and in the American colony as to whether Mrs. John Jacob Astor, now [illegible] stands in the ranks of American divorcees will receive such marks of royal consideration as were granted her when she was the wife of Colonel Astor.

Here, for instance the matter of the extensive royal enclosure at Ascot, to which Mrs. Astor has been so highly honored a visitor. It has been the unwritten law of generations that no one in society whose name has been associated with scandal or who has known any domestic difficulties shall gain admission to this enclosure.

In the matter of court functions, too, king. I [illegible] is even stickler about having his courts free from divorcees, but Mrs. Astor's beauty and popularity may result in an exception being made in her case. of course, if she marries an Englishman, as society people here seem to think she will do, why her divorce will be forgotten.

Various names are mentioned as Mrs. Astor's prospective husband, but Hon. Captain Montagu Peaker is generally accorded the position of favorite. His assiduous [illegible] during the recent visits of Mrs. Astor were indefatigable, while in his company the beautiful American seemed to lose that worried look she continually wears and was absolutely smiled, something she rarely does.

A peculiar complication may attend the decision concerning the Ascot enclosure owing to the marital difference between Lord and Lady Churchill. Lady Churchill is a sister of Lord Londale, while Lord Churchill is [illegible] to King. On the king, [illegible] the final word as to whom shall be admitted to the exclusive royal enclosure at Ascot. The question society is asking is whether Lord Churchill, following precedent, will now decline to invite himself to the Ascot enclosure, and whether he will turn down his own wife if she applies.

London Running to the Freakiest of Clubs.

Englishmen who frequently criticise Americans for freak dinners, clubs, etc., will be obliged to be careful of their future accusations as an epidemic of the latter has broken out in London. One of the most recent examples is "The 800," a club started by George Ashton, the King's ticket agent. It will soon be exhibit-ted in the neighborhood of Piccadilly, and every member on the list of which includes the principal West End art dealers and concert agents, will be known not by name, but number. The servants are to be invisible, and whenever a member wishes a drink he presses a button with his number. Each time with the name of drink and the refreshment slides into his room apparently without human agency [illegible] the usage of the club. They declared that some of the great picture dealers were engaged in such shady transactions that privacy were a[illegible] to have business conversations overheard by the club servants.

The other freak club is forming but not yet enlisted. Its purpose is that of "regimenting life," and no member is eligible was less not $5,000 a year. The regimenting of this [illegible] can not be imagined when it is stated that professional humorists and entertainers are absolutely taboo[illegible] from it.

English noblemen are taking to aviation enthusiastically. The Duke of Westminster has ordered a Farman biplane and will begin taking flying lessons in France from a Farman biplane or an Antoinette. He will visit Paris shortly to take lessons in aviation. De Walden is the most sought after man in London, and his friends [illegible] the reason he is learning to fly so as he can escape designing ladies matrimonially inclined. Meanwhile the Liberals hope the peers will fall to take to aviation and they cruelly suggest that it will be a double blessing in obliterating the Lords and increasing the revenue from death duties.

The oldest established paper in Europe, the Court Circular, whose dictums are taken without a word of protest, and from which all papers reprint without investigation or comment, sad to relate, has been caught faking in noting a recent house party where the King was present, the Court Circular announced that among the guests were "George Keppel and Mrs. Keppel." The fact is Mr. Keppel was not there at all. It might have been an error if this had occurred once, but it has happened frequently and now the faking is assured.

J. G. Bacon, M. A., secretary and Bursar.

D. J. O Donoghue, librarian.

A remarkable and interesting feature of the inception of the National University and its associated colleges at Cork and Galway, is the fact that the professors of Irish subjects are almost all graduates in Celtic from Germany universities, where they were obliged to get their training.

Dr. Osborn Bergen is a native of Cork and a gifted poet in Gaelic. He studied old and modern Irish at Berlin and at the University of Freiburg. At the latter he passed "Magnum Cum Laude" on original studies in Celtic language and literature. Standard Old English and was awarded the degree of Ph. D. For some years he has been professor of Celtic at Bryn Mawr College in this city. He is an eminent authority on Old and Middle Irish grammar and texts, historian, Irish genealogist, Celtic philologist and Irish poet of considerable merit.

Dr. Dinneen, who is to fill the chair of Irish language and literature in University College at Cork, rendered valuable aid to Professor Thurneysen in the preparation of his great work on "The Grammar of the Celtic Language." Dr. Dinneen is well known in America by reason of his connection with the Catholic University at Washington, where he was professor of Gaelic. Because of ill health he was obliged to resign his chair and return to Ireland.

Tomas O'Maille, who is to be Professor of Irish Language and Literature at the University College of Galway, studied under Professor Zimmer in Berlin and took his degree of Doctor of Philology at the University of Freiburg, where he was a pupil of Professor Thurneysen.

It is expected that T. M. Kettle, in view of his appointment to the professorship of national economics in the National University, will not seek election to parliament at the coming general election. The position of Swift MacNeill is different. As professor of constitutional law, his duties as lecturer will be limited to his own attendance at Westminster, and it may be expected that he will not retire from the House of Commons.

Mr. Kettle has many friends in the United States who will recall him as the gifted young member of parliament who, in company with his colleague, Joseph Devlin, Mr. Hazelton M. P., visited America during the memorable campaign for the parliamentary fund.

The National University is now safely launched on its career. That it will before long become known as one of the great universities of Europe is the confident expectation of the Irish people of the world. Nor will it be long before the Irish language and literature will be taught in the universities of Europe in the confident conviction that the Irish people of the world will no longer tolerate the neglect of the language which has marked the utter scorn of all the various regimes in Ireland. The receptions given to Mr. Dinneen and the various honors which he has been made to his appetite so far, have been of the most enthusiastic nature among the people in the old land.

REAL POLITICAL NEWS of All the Parties by A MAN WHO KNOWS

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

ONE week ago to day it was pointed out to the folks behind the Committee of One Hundred or One Hundred and Fifty or Seven Hundred and Fifty, or whatever it is, that Boston turned down Plan One principally because it had the connecting system tied up in it, and that Boston voters look on a convention of men picked by State street with as much suspicion as they would regard a convention of burglars elected by the police.

Since we log to point out that a convention is a convention whether it is held in Chipman Hall, Boston, or the Court Square Theatre, Springfield. We would not dare to estimate the number of Boston voters who took upon the meeting in Chipman Hall a few nights ago as a convention and if anyone thinks they have that things were run and did not run themselves.

That is a crude way of putting it, perhaps, but it hits the nail squarely on the head. It is sincerely hoped that when the committee of Seven Hundred and Fifty gets together next Wednesday the men on it will be responsible enough to do a little better job than they did last time. Perhaps there has to be a committee of that sort. But if there's got to be a convention, for pity's sake let's have some class to it.

Richard Olney, He Knows.

HON RICHARD OLNEY presided at the last meeting. He knows something about running conventions. Mr. Olney knows better than anybody else that if rules are not followed and the recent rules of last Tuesday night had obtained there a party convention certain folks in this city would be crying "foul" right now.

That was a plan to free the Democratic party of city affairs and to create a council to nominate candidates for municipal offices. The resolution it was a laudable bit of work and one which, if properly drawn, should be acceptable to have every name appearing on a ballot voted on and every candidate was government of the people, for the people and by the people. It is to follow the same course in the matter of nominations for mayor as for the City Council? The Great Bull?

Be that as it may, after all this diplomacy had been gone through, about a dozen of the whole thing be spoiled by referring the list of names for Lower committees to a body picked by the men who run the conventions. You can't get away from it, you can't get away from it, you can't get away from it. Unless you do away with the whole committee with the whole committee was not a closed organization which acted under orders.

There's a grand opportunity to rectify matters when next Wednesday's meeting is held. It isn't necessary to be political bosses to run a meeting in the right way and above board manner. All that's needed is a little horse sense.

* * *

Consider Only the Candidate. Forget Managers' Mistakes.

DON'T run away with the idea that this is a crack at anybody's candidacy for Mayor. The men to be considered for the office of the committee of Some Hundred are some odd may be the same men who have run running as candidates for Mayor. But their mistakes as committee runners ought not to be considered when a candidate for Mayor should be voted for or against. The candidate should be considered on his own merits.

This committee management may be the best thing that ever happened to Boston and it may not. It all depends on how things are carried out. If the public is satisfied with the movement are putting it through in the right way, well and good, because they want Boston to be well governed. None of the folks who have been asked Boston pretty well with real, honest-to-goodness, non-political men. The Hanes Commission could find plenty to keep it busy for a year. But if the public is identified with the movement have become tired and it is just to get their names into the newspapers.

Some others and we are this without a bit of apology in the fight who have been in the ring six times—are wearing the commit tee thing for what it is worth. We have come to be the committee's candidate for Mayor, and they have let it be understood the committee they will be able more easily to do a bit of political hocks work on Mr. Storrow and disconnect him from a part of his handicap.

* * *

Money Barrel On Each Side.

SPEAKING about a bankroll tends up to be another matter. So far this column has not been taken into the confidence of any of the candidates or near candidates for Mayor as to how much money they have of them is going to spend on electing to be. But like to make a little prediction.

When the fight has got a bankroll. We're not insinuating that that's anybody's business but his own. Other mayoralty candidates are not quite so well endowed with the world's goods. But don't let that worry you. The most important candidate against Mr. Storrow, if the latter runs, is not going to go hungry for money, unless he wants to.

You know more or less as much money as Mr. Storrow is to be ready and ready to help him. That's the fight. That's the fight. That's the fight

NEWS AND NOTES OF CATHOLIC CHURCHES AND IRISH ASSOCIATIONS

'COMMON AMERICANISM' AMONG CREEDS URGED BY ARCHBISHOP IN ADDRESS

Explains Catholicism to Women's Alliance of Second Church.

"THE Roman Catholic Church, Its Organization and Work in the United States," was the subject of a scholarly and exhaustive paper, prepared by Archbishop O'Connell, which was read Wednesday before the Women's Alliance in the hall of the Second Church (Unitarian), in Copley square.

The Archbishop was not present in person at the gathering which included a large number of the prominent women of Back Bay society, and the paper was read by Monsignor Splaine, chancellor of the archdiocese, to whom at the close a cordial vote of thanks was unanimously tendered by his appreciative audience.

The presentation of the paper came about as the result of an intimation conveyed to the Archbishop by the Rev. Thomas Van Ness, pastor of the Second Church, that the members of the Women's Alliance were anxious to receive from authoritative principles of faith, on the part of the Archbishop O'Connell to explain to the Whole the Catholic Church is and what the church is doing.

The hall in which the paper was read was crowded throughout and the most attentive audience, the reading of which occupied one hour and forty-five minutes.

Not an Exchange of Pulpits.

At the outset Monsignor Splaine made it clear to the audience that the Archbishop in allowing a priest to address them was in no way a step in exchange of pulpits, for that is a thing that the Archbishop can not countenance, never or under any circumstances, and in giving this permission to the members of the Alliance Neither was it the intention of the Archbishop that this paper should in any way to controversial or argumentative in character. It was simply an attempt on the part of the Archbishop of a courteous invitation through [illegible] Van Ness [illegible] what the Catholic Church is and what the church is doing.

The Archbishop's paper opened with an expression of his deep appreciation of [illegible] invitation [illegible].

"I come to present to you," said the writer, "a true painting of the Catholic Church in the United States, to tell you what she is doing and what she is doing for the country, and to [illegible] the Archbishop [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] broad horizon, but just as much of learning as will lend of the religious [illegible] shapes the spiritual life of many millions of your fellow citizens.

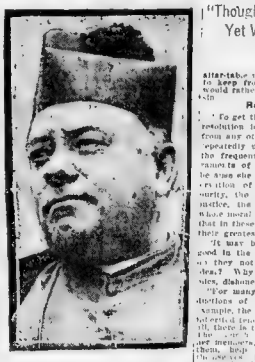
"What at first suggests itself in the paper were followed with interest by the audience, there were some points upon which the desire for information was manifestly the deepest nature. Chief among these was the explanation of what is popularly known as the "infallibility of the Pope."

On this point the Archbishop's paper said:

"Infallibility does not attach to the Pope as a private person or to any individual as a private person in the Catholic Church. The Church does not claim that the Pope is infallible in his personal character or in his every act. Infallibility attaches to the Pope only when he speaks officially as the supreme pastor and teacher of all Christians, and when thus speaking he does by the supreme apostolic authority a doctrine of faith or morals to be held by the universal church. Under these circumstances, the sovereign Pontiff is endowed with the same infallibility with which the divine Redeemer wished His Church to be invested when He willed a doctrine on faith or morals."

"The Church, in defining the official infallibility of the Pope, set up no new doctrine, but proclaimed solemnly the truth which in all its essentials had been generally and practically accepted and relied upon by the Catholic church. From the beginning Christ promised to be infallibly guided by the Holy Ghost, reading upon this promise of Christ that the world be with [illegible] days even to the consummation of the world, and again that He will send upon the Apostles another Paraclete, the Spirit of Truth, who would teach them all truth and remain with them forever.

"Now, the infallible church necessarily



ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL.

[illegible] infallible pontiff; they stand or fall together. They forbids us to admit an infallible church, resting upon infallible foundation; an infallible sheepfold guided and secured by a infallible shepherd, so in fact a body with a fallible head. For if the head may err, the whole flock will go astray.

Question of the Confessional.

Dealing with the question of the confessional as a corrective of sins, the Archbishop said:

"Besides confession of sin, every Catholic knows that to obtain forgiveness from God, he must have true sorrow—otherwise his confession were worse than mockery. It were sacrilege and that sorrow is of no value if the penitent [illegible] every definite [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PARADE OF FASHION MAKES OPERA SOCIAL FUNCTION

By Elizabeth Elliott.

IN all the glory of new Parisian frocks and gorgeous jewels, society blossomed forth, dazzled and completely took captive the general public which gathered at the opera the past week to see the smart set at its best as well as to hear the music. There were the climbers, the comfortably-off middle class and the dressmakers and milliners who went to gaze and remained to [illegible]. There was one grand surprise to most of them to discover that the much heralded Boston society women really owned such gorgeous jewels and could wear with such grace and ease the beautifully modeled gowns.

One source of great surprise seemed the fact that the gowns worn by the fashionables were all [illegible] even one exception—decollete, that conservative Boston bared her neck and arms to the curious public, unblushingly.

It was the first real opportunity the outside world has had to glimpse the sartorial glories of the inner circle and it made the best of the opportunity.

The opening night the grand tier of boxes was one blaze of jewels, and diamond tiaras—which until that night, it wasn't known Boston women possessed—crowned the inferiority of the royal heads of the social kingdom.

The boxes were like tropical gardens of color, and the "buds" and "blooms" were in their element.

Society a Radiant, Happy Lot.

The spirit of the whole thing seemed to take even the most conservative off their feet and left the fashionables a radiantly, lovely and happy lot, who had completely abandoned themselves to the joy of the occasion. It certainly was exhilarating and even the most blase were filled with wonderment and surprise at it all—the beauty of the Opera House itself, the genuine merit of the opera, and most of all the royal way in which Boston society arose to the demands of the occasion and dazzled not only the public, but one another.

Each woman who had discarded her conservative concert-gown and donned, what, in her own boudoir seemed to her a daring creation, and who had gone almost trembling forth with the idea firmly fixed in her mind that she would be compared with the other fashionables, overdressed, at first breathed a sigh of relief upon discovering herself or rather her gown—only one among many, and later perhaps took in the elaborate details with envy and vowed to outshine them all on the second night.

And it may be that which caused the second night of grand opera to be declared by all the night of nights, so far as the gowning was concerned, and both maids and matrons went to the very extreme of lavishness. Mrs. Gardner, who the first evening appeared in her well-known frock of black lace, was among the first to take her cue and the second night blossomed forth in all the gorgeousness of decollete, diamonds and cream lace gown with silver trimmings.

Of course the majority were on the lookout for THE ONE gown which could rightfully bear the distinction of being the handsomest there and for the woman who could, for sure, be dubbed the beauty of the Boston smart set. The choice of gowns was a difficult one, but I think the palm on the first night might be rightfully claimed by that most stately of Boston's very stately matrons, Mrs. Bayard Thayer. Mrs. Thayer's gown was a gorgeous and clinging creation of white gauze embroidered in silver and the corsage outlined in diamonds. On her well poised head was the lustrous coronet of diamonds, the most costly of any in the large audience.

Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, who is always a notable figure where society congregates, was in her box early each evening, where, with her husband, son and daughter, she entertained most royally. In her accustomed rich black velvet gowns and handsome jewels she attracted much admiring attention. A picturesque little figure in the Jordan box on Tuesday night was the petite blond daughter Dorothy, who wore a stunning frock of old rose satin and white lace and a throw of ermine. She received many callers during the evening and in her sweet, gracious manner made each and every one feel most welcome. Among the notable callers in the Jordan box the second night was Mme. Nordica, who was, as soon as discovered, the shining mark for the opera glass battalion. She was quite the most gorgeously gowned of any woman present, and at first glimpse the entire bodice of her gown seemed covered with diamonds. Resplendent in all her jewels and her gown of spangled black chiffon over tulle, a stomacher of diamonds, a diamond necklace and a pendant, diamond earrings and a diamond tiara, she could hardly help being discovered at once, and wherever she went all eyes were turned in her direction.

The one and only titled lady in the audience Monday night was the very handsome and very blonde Countess Moltke of Germein. Thayer who has been the guest of her parents, the Nathaniel Thayers, at their country place at Lancaster and stayed over for the special purpose of attending Boston's first night of Grand Opera in its own opera house. The Countess, who was in the Thayer box, made a striking picture in her Parisian gown of raspberry velvet trimmed with raspberry chiffon and oriental applique. Her jewels consisted of a pearl collar with a large diamond clasp, a diamond and pearl tiara and diamond earrings. In striking contrast to the blonde beauty of the Countess was the dark Oriental beauty of her sister, Miss Sally Thayer, who wore white satin trimmed with touches of turquoise blue, and white chiffon and a single strand of pearls about her neck. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer was a distinguished figure in black lace and a long chain of pearls.

Of course the debutantes were the centre of interest as this was practically their first public appearance and the bells and beauty of the bud-set was for the first time selected, passed upon and admired. In this case it was, as all who know her might expect, the winsome daughter of our Governor, Miss Dorothy Draper, who was vastly admired as she sat in her father's box on both evenings and received the many callers who dropped around to pay their respects. Miss Draper has improved wonderfully in appearance the last year and from the frolicsome young schoolgirl has developed into the most charming of society butterflies.

Dorothy Draper Center of Many Eyes.

Then, too, her recent trip abroad has done much for her and the stamp of Paris on all her handsome frocks. The first night she wore a vastly becoming gown of white satin trimmed with touches of blue, made along the smartest though simplest lines, and pearls were her only ornaments.

Of last year's groups of buds none was more popular or more sought after than Miss Helen Sears, who was with her mother and a party of friends in the Sears box each evening. On Wednesday night she attracted no end of admiring attention as she strolled about the corridors with her bodyguard of happy-faced youths, each one of whom, with one sweet word or glance, became your knight. For all the wealthy girls in the Boston smart set Miss Sears is quite the greatest heiress, and that aside from her family position, her wealth of good looks and handsome gowns is sufficient to make her a shining light.

It's rather amusing to notice how very closely the younger Boston girls are chaperoned.

Miss Jean Bird, the most interesting of all the newly engaged girls at the opera, and her fiance, Louis Agassiz Shaw, make a notably interesting young pair strolling about through the corridors during the intermissions. The Bird girls, Joan and Edith, are quite the most strikingly lovely of the younger girls of the exclusive set and always are gowned in the very acme of good taste. On Monday night Miss Joan, tall, graceful and slender, was most attractive in black chiffon and pearls and made an excellent foil for her pretty sister Edith in her gown of shimmering white satin and chiffon trimmed with pearls.

By far the handsomest of the younger matrons was the tall, blonde, Mrs. Alfred Codman, who as Lydia Eliot, was the belle of her exclusive set. Mrs Codman never lacks for attention and there are always men a-plenty in her train. She wore pale blue chiffon over white satin, the bodice trimmed with pearls and cut extremely low, and a Grecian band of pearls and gold in her hair.

One of the strikingly beautiful creations seen on Wednesday night was the gown worn by Mrs. Guy Lowell, who has just returned from New York, where she went to attend the wedding of her brother, Andrew Robeson Sargent, and Miss De Acosta. Her gown was made along latest Grecian lines and was of gold spangled net trimmed with gold and diamonds.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2d (Nancie Mitchell), a bride of three years or more, and looking more like a schoolgirl than a full-fledged matron, and who perhaps owns more expensive jewels and wears frocks than any other of the younger matrons of her set, was looking most charming on Wednesday night as to be assured as to warding [illegible] and [illegible]. Her corsage bouquet was of orchids and not a [illegible] was evident.

Wednesday Night Saw Many at Opera.

Wednesday night saw society as I have said, out in more gorgeous raiment than at the premier of the special opera house.

Miss Priscilla Blackpole was a centre of much interest as she walked [illegible] the corridor during the [illegible] chatted with her many admirers. She wore a trained gown of flowered cotton and a few well-placed jewels.

Betty Hall [illegible] was [illegible] for some [illegible] I have [illegible] Miss Hall wore white satin and [illegible] pink roses with a deep flounce of [illegible] chiffon.

Dorothy Jordan was another of the Vincent Club set who came in for no attention [illegible] in a party of friends, including Miss Gertrude and Ruth Hopkins.

Miss Torrey wore a very becoming gown of pale blue [illegible] and a long collar of pearls, and Miss Hopkins was in cream satin and white chiffon.

Bishop and Mrs. William Lawrence, with their two attractive daughters, Elsie and Ruth, made an interesting [illegible] party. Mrs. Lawrence, always queenly gowned, was in blue satin and [illegible] blue.

Mrs. Lars Anderson in her gown of satin, her diamond [illegible] ornament, her diamond [illegible] and brocaded satin, with its [illegible] of ermine, attracted much admiring [illegible] and stood waiting for her [illegible] he was settling some little question about the tickets.

Mrs. A. Forbes Cozart wore a handsome gown of white brocaded [illegible] with [illegible] In fact, head entered it [illegible] to be the keynote of all these well-gowned [illegible] which were [illegible] beautiful.

Mrs. Herbert Clarke wore a [illegible] white satin and [illegible] over black satin and Mrs. Austin Wellington was in white.

One of the most striking gowns was that worn by Miss Mary Bartlett Crane. It was a heavy black lace embroidered in silver. Her ornaments were diamonds and pearls.

Miss Grace Edwards was picturesque in a beautifully fashioned gown of white satin, trimmed with heavy white lace and studded with [illegible] conquest of [illegible].

Mrs. James A. Garland Hostess of Happy Party.

On Tuesday night Mrs. James A. Garland had a happy party at [illegible] Among them were her cousin, Miss Josephine Gilmer, Mr. and Mrs. Jose Canfield and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Greer of New Yorker. Mrs. Garland was [illegible] gowned in lace, spangled in gold, diamond jewels were pearls and sapphires. Miss Shaw wore yellow embroidered satin and lace, and Miss Fairchild, black satin with bodice outlined in white.

Miss Susan Thayer and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Van Rensselaer Crowninshield were among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Thayer. They formed one of the most animated box parties of the evening. Mrs. Thayer wore white satin covered with lace; Miss Thayer, white satin and chiffon; Mrs. Crosby, electric blue satin under [illegible] lace, pearls and diamonds.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Hayden occupied the box of their son, Coleord Hayden, Jr., Sunday. They had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fairfax Clapp. Mrs. Hayden wore white satin, lace trimmed, with diamond ornaments. Mrs. Clapp, white satin, [illegible] back in [illegible].

The Bryce Allen box immediately adjoins the box of Eben D. Jordan. Mrs. Allen's box was a gay one, with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Allen and [illegible] Norman White with a party of friends.

With Mrs. Hunting N. Slater were her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul D'Int. Charles N. Loeffler and Professor Ruthven of the Columbia University department of music. Mrs. Slater looked best in cloth of gold covered with gold embroidered net and rare diamonds in corsage and at her neck.

Professor and Mrs. Schofield had as their guests Professor Lowell of Harvard University and Mrs. Lowell and Professor and Mrs. Barrett Wendell. Mrs. Wendell wore pale blue satin and chiffon with white lace.

Adjoining the garland box was that occupied by Mrs. Charles F. Wright. Her guests included Mr. and Mrs. William J. Wright, Mrs. A. Forbes Cozart and her sister, Miss Hall [illegible] and Mr. Lord in Prince. The hostess wore gray embroidered satin with lace. Some of her guests [illegible] in [illegible] Mrs. Cozart [illegible] and Mrs. Hall [illegible] Mrs. Wright [illegible] and Mrs. Lord [illegible] and [illegible] Mrs. Lawson, pink velvet [illegible] and [illegible].

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Ayer had a fine party [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Beatrice Ayer. [illegible] and Frederick Ayer, Jr. [illegible] Mrs. Ayer [illegible] with diamonds. Miss Ayer [illegible] white [illegible] and Miss Mary Hammond [illegible] and [illegible] of flowered silk.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Grew had as their guests Miss Christine and Miss Mary Hammond. Mrs. Hammond wore black lace with diamonds. Miss Hammond [illegible] white [illegible] with [illegible] pale pink and Miss Mary Hammond [illegible] and [illegible] of flowered silk.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Amory had [illegible] them their daughters, Miss Susan and Miss Elinor Amory. Mrs. Amory wore gowned alike in white satin [illegible] with butterfly [illegible] and gold embroidery. Mrs. Amory wore [illegible] trimmed with silk and [illegible].

ASCATCO ACTUALLY CURES ASTHMA

Efficacy of Famous Austrian Treatment Has Been Unquestionably Established.

The claim which are now made in behalf of ascatco, the Austrian specific for asthma, are based upon its remarkable work in curing nearly one million serious cases in this country in the past six years. It is stated, without qualification, that ascatco will cure asthma permanently without necessitating a change of climate, and will bring speedy relief, warding off choking attacks and other severe manifestations of distress with far more certainty than anything yet discovered. Its treatment is simple, ascatco being taken in small seven-drop doses twice daily. In most cases the disease is eliminated from the system in a few weeks.

Riker-Jaynes' drug stores and drug dept. of Houghton & Dutton's in Boston now carry a supply of the preparation in two sizes—the fifty-cent size for mild cases and for the prevention of night attacks, and the $3 size, containing enough for a month's treatment, in which time cures often result.

The Austrian Laboratory, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City, will send an experimental treatment of ascatco to all who write for it.

Winter Helps Everybody But the Fat Man

The blood is changed as many as three times every year. It is thin in summer and thick in winter. With a fat man this is not the case. His blood making apparatus grinds away the whole year, and instead of making good blood produces huge layers of worthless tissue, which nature throws away from the nourishing centers of the body in order to clear the way corners of the system. If fat people only knew how easy it is to reduce their fat they would not become discouraged. Marmola Tablets are made after the famous Marmola Prescription, and are harmless. They are taken after meals. No need to fast, diet or exercise. Just take a tablet after a meal and that meal will not add to your fat. More than that, Marmola Tablets will reduce fat at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a week. After your fat is gone there will not be [illegible] flabby wrinkles and layers of loose skin. Pay attention to your food, [illegible] digestion, [illegible] you feel [illegible] Marmola Tablets [illegible] Book. 10,000 WOMEN KEEP ONE SECRET

Even Their Husbands or Sweethearts Are Not Taken Into Their Confidence.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 13.—To celebrate the keeping of a secret from men for forty years by 10,000 women a convention was held in the little college town of Mt. Pleasant, Ia., where two score years ago it was promulgated by seven college girls, four of whom will be present at this meeting.

Women several societies have been formed as adjuncts to lodges, and in each societies the member have kept a secret from other women, but not from men, for they have always taken their husbands or sweethearts into their confidence. But here is a secret so man has ever learned. Nearly all of the members of this society are married, but the men think they are only held to themselves as sacred from their husbands is the naming of the sisters of the Q. U which is the name of the organization.

The society was started on January 21, 1869, when seven college girls at Wesleyan University, Mount Pleasant, Ia., about the great store in the music hall and determined to form some bond to mutually unite them forever.

On that day at a college gathering in the music hall a number of girls had appeared wearing a secret badge, which was a custom arrow with the letters "Q U" — and these seven girls met after the latter joined among the number. A spirit of rivalry was immediately aroused between the two girls formed at new society and adopted a five-point star as their emblem, the points signifying "Faith, love, purity, justice and truth." They drafted a constitution, colored an oath and administered it, secret officers and selected that initial name that always has been a mystery.

These seven college girls were Hattie Briggs-Bousquet dead; Alice Coffin (dead), Ella Stewart (dead), Mrs. Mary Allen Sheffield, 702 Fifth avenue, Grinnell, Ia.; Mrs. Fran Rhodes Talbott, No. 2,000 Indiana avenue, Chicago; Mrs. Nellie Peterson Field, No. 1223 East Eighty-ninth street, Chicago, and Mrs. Alves Silva Belloni, No. 253 West Park avenue, Aurora, Ill.

When they left Cedar Falls and took Western University the I. C girls merged their organization into a Greek letter society. An effort was made to convert the P. E. O. into such, but the latter insisted the P. E. O. stood for strictly American organization with American ideas. They rejected the Greek letter, but determined chapters might be formed outside the college with non-college members. Then these college girls left their studies and drifted apart, but wherever they went they formed a Q. U. chapter.

So the order has grown until now there are state grand chapters in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Colorado, Illinois, California, Kansas, Washington and Oklahoma, with a total membership of 10,000. Over all these there is now a supreme grand lodge of which the supreme grand priestess is Mrs. Carrie P. Peterson of Aurora, Neb. It is this supreme grand lodge that meets October 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 in Mount Pleasant, the scene of the beginning of the order, to celebrate the fortieth anniversary.

LOVE, TRAGEDY AND NEW HATS ARE OFFERED BOSTON FIRST NIGHTERS THIS WEEK

Lillian Russell, Back From Europe With Sumptuous Gowns, Will Present the "Widow's Might," While Viola Allen Will Be Her Direct Opposite in Crawford's Cloister Drama, "The White Sister."

By Morton Birge.

THOUGH Lillian Russell in "The Widow's Might" at the Hollis and Viola Allen in "The White Sister" at the Majestic are the only new attractions at the first-class houses this week, they form a combination as interesting to theatregoers as the natures of the stars and the plays are diverse.

Miss Russell (to get away for once from that stock phrase, "The Fair Lillian") comes in the new comedy written for her by Edmund Day. There are four rich men in love with the widow (Miss Russell). The latter picks one man of the four before the final curtain. So there is conjetting in plenty for the engage ne star. New Russell gowns and hats are announced, also, as no inconsider ble feature of the production. It is understood that there are four new hats in particular, the latest from Paris.

Far different is the story of "The White Sister," in which Viola Allen will appear as the central figure of F. Marion Crawford's tragic love story. There is no succession of gay attire for the star but the sombre dress of a nun. Of course, in every there is none, but instead the struggle between a woman's love and her religious vows. A powerful cast accompanies the star.

"The Gay Hussars," which held out for an even month in this city earlier in the season, gave up the struggle last night at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. (25 cent rate to Broadway). But there is a silver lining for Boston in this financial cloud. Miss Florence Reid, the charming young Baroness Traska of "The Gay Hussars," is coming here during the present week to play in that other Savage production, "The Love Cure," the musical romance of Lydia and now running at the Tremont. Miss Reid is to replace Christine Nielsen in the role of Mildred Silliman. Boston won't recall her various singing of O, You Reid, Bad Moo," in "The Gay Hussars." Henry W. Savage calls Florence Reid his "schoolgirl prima donna." He discovered her at a par or recital last season in Rochester, N. Y. He engaged her for the Savage forces. Her debut took place in "The Gay Hussars" at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, and she was one of the best things in that unbidden but unfortunate Hungarian operetta.

The Savage management also has a snarl over Henry E. Dixey and "Mary Jane's Pa," which closed their present season in St. Paul last night. (The fare to Broadway in this case is about $25.) It was announced recently that the trouble was not with the play, but between the manager and star. That announcement was highly puzzled in the light of later developments. Mr. Dixey has sued Mr. Savage in $50,000 for alleged slander at a time for $11,000. The latter is based on a guarantee of $800 a week for the remaining twenty-three weeks "Mary Jane's Pa" was scheduled to be out. Mr. Dixey claims that the management circulated false reports that the failure of the tour was due to his poor acting. Mr. Savage in turn has begun negotiations for the play with intentions to start it out again on Thanksgiving Day with Max Figman in Dixey's role.

COLD ACT IS NOT A FROST.

Though it is the coldest act in vaudeville Sam Mahoney's new arctic swimming stunt at Keith's is by no means a frost. Far from it. Mahoney holds over at Keith's this week and will be sent over the circuit as soon as the Boston engagement is over. There is much local interest in the act. Not only is Mahoney a Bostonian, but the production is one by the local Keith house. The house certainly has given the swimmer a magnificent stage setting for his act, with aurora borealis effects on the back drop and other accessories. The ice over which Mahoney climbs and on which he sits is no property ice, either. It is the real congealed article. Mahoney picks up a lump of it now and then and smashes it in pieces on a big cake just to prove it. The swimmer's .225 pound carcass and fresh make an impressive show ng in his swimming trunks. Mahoney's little talk on physical exercises is all right, but he needs to break away from that "I'll endeavor to show you" patter. What's the matter with saying I will show you," and letting i go at that.

They have cut and shuffled the Shubert deck on "The Blue Mouse" again and the result is that this engaging creature will leave the Globe Theatre next Saturday night for Philadelphia. Only last week it was announced that "The Blue Mouse" would be here indefinitely, the booking of William A. Brady's "The Man from Home" at the Globe having been bought off for that purpose. But telegraphic orders came Wednesday from the Shubert headquarters for "The Blue Mouse" to close here November 20. It's successor at the Globe will be Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City," which was produced last week with Walter Hampden in the leading role. "The City" is the first play which Clyde Fitch ever wrote or adapted in which he resorted to murder in development of his plot.

ELSIE JANIS IS STILL POETIC.

One of the best things in "The Fair Co-Ed" is Elsie Janis's impersonation of how George M. Cohan would like to act Romeo, if he could. Miss Janis is Cohan, cane, grit, voice and all. But one part of the impersonation is her very own, and that is the verse she sings in it. She is a poet—as has been related—and here is the verse she dashed off for the Cohan turn:

Prize sonbrette,
One best bet,	Holler and wave the American flag;
Ja-la-i	Street sonbrette,
Me for her when first we met,	Best thing yet,

Canny John Craig. He picks the height of football season to give the first stock production in Boston of "The College Widow." It is also an interesting coincidence that, while Mr. Craig and his associates at the Castle Square will be shouting for Atwater College and jeering its hated rival, Bingham, Elsie Janis and her co-educational mates will be doing just the reverse at the Colonial Theatre. When George Ade wrote "The College Widow" he made it an Atwater vs. Bingham comedy. In "The Fair Co-Ed" he turned around and located the scenes at Bingham. "The College Widow" is delightful comedy, vigorous in action and talk. Remember that explosive line of the elder Bolton, "You're a —— of a Baptist!"

Melodrama's loss is vaudeville's gain. Grand Opera House patrons were wont to applaude Dave Genaro and Ray Bailey in "Tony the Bootblack." Now Genaro and Bailey are vaudevillians and come to the American Music Hall to-morrow. This will be their first Boston appearance since they left the "thrillers." Their vaudeville turn is called "The Flirtation Dance." George Fuller Golden, Rinaldo, the violinist, and the Marco Twins are also of the American Music Hall bill here.

Clifton Crawford of "Three Twins" company, who is author and composer of "Mary Green," "Nancy Brown," "Starlight" and other song hits, says that a really good song goes better if it is first given by a slucer stage instead of singer and chorus. Crawford says:

"It is a waste of energy and a waste of material to have the chorus on the stage when a song depends on the combination of lyric and melody. The faces, expression and the stage business of the chorus take away interest from the principal character. The true worth of the number is lost. The introduction of the chorus for swinging, dynamic motion and marches is all right. But, for a really good song that is to be popularized, the chorus is unnecessary."

William H. Turner is "The Sporting Deacon" comes to the Grand Opera House to-morrow. One of the big scenes in the play is a horse race. In more serious vein is the newspaper "Drink" which will be put on for the week by the Lothrop Stock Company at the Bowdoin Square.

The Eno house Lauds go to the Columbia for the week.

Fred Irwin's Big Show comes in to the Gayety, succeeding Irwin's Majestics, which were there last week.

The old Howard offers the Dreamland Burlesquers.

* * * *

The attitude of the church toward the stage is a subject of constant interest, as shown by the comments of irregular space devoted to sermons and other chri tal sayings regarding theatres. Recently the Rev. Caleb R. Fisher of Lowell chi tigerously said, after seeing a vaudeville bill from Mississippi:

"The theatre is a source of happiness which has its legitimate place when the play is wholesome and presents a lesson for the people to think over."

Now the Rev. George A. Pressnet, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd of this city (Roxbury), told the Episcopal ministers' meeting that clergymen ought to cease writing plays or encouraging parishioners to write them. "Don't," he said, "pretend to practiced dramatists and actors.

Now the Rev. Joseph H. Patterson of Minneapolis (Universalist) gives his reverend brethren another jab along the line of dramatics in saying:

"The influences of the theatre we cannot belittle. While it has become a problem with the clergymen whether or not he continue the Sunday evening services, the theatres are filling their houses seven nights a week."

REAL ORIGIN OF 'LILLIAN RUSSELL'

Mystery of How Stage Beauty Got Her Name Is Made Known.

The [illegible] of a weekly mag[illegible] to dramatic reference to Lillian Russell [illegible] here in Boston, when [illegible] was passed by the late [illegible] as was then the [illegible] Hans Jansen, who was [illegible] Desire Infer at the old Boston Museum. The article is of timely interest on account of the appearance of Miss Russell at the Hollis Street Theatre to-morrow night

But the magazines article might have gone back a bit further and related an interesting account of how the girl, who was to be one of the reigning stage beauties, came to be called Lillian Russell. On a recent evening, when Miss Russell was playing in Philadelphia, N. J., Harry Sanderson, the veteran manager who for years guided the destinies of Tony Pastor's little theatre in New York, now conducting the Philadelphia playhouse, had Miss Russell and a group of friends in her dressing [illegible] how the name Lillian Russell was invented

"Early in the season," said Mr. Sanderson, "as Mrs Rose recommended to Tony Pastor a young actress named Helen Leslie Leonard, for a chorus place in the Pastor company. Mrs Rose's note merely said that the girl was a beauty and could sing a little and had been sing ng in a Chicago church choir. Pastor heard the girl sing [illegible] After her [illegible] Harry, we've [illegible] at Chicago re[illegible]

I took down an old copy of 'Era Almanac' and we looked over the many names therein No combination of two names suited us. Then we went at the names separately. Pastor thought Lillian would do for a first name. Then he settled on Russell for a last name. 'Lillian Russell Lillian Russell' he repeated every time it 'sounds good'

The name pleased Pastor so well that the next time he [illegible] Lillian Russell [illegible] She was established and from that hour she proceeded to add lustre to the newly-coined star"

As Mr Sanderson was talking Miss Russell [illegible] to greet the arrival of [illegible] of her engagement with Mr. [illegible] Bat el [illegible] to Mr Sanderson that this was the first time she had known just how the Lillian Russell combination was formed

VIOLA ALLEN JUST DREADS A 'PHONE

Concerning Viola Allen who comes to this city to-morrow in "The White Sister," it is said that she is decidedly "notional" in her interesting personality. For instance

She hates a telephone and will not go near one if she can help it. She was involved in an awkward dilemma once through a telephone message and has distrusted that handy means of communication ever since.

She has a notion that feeding is one of the best sports for men or women. Consequently she is an expert fencer and has surprised various maitres d'armes with whom she has crossed foils.

She has a notion, too, that the public is not interested in the private affairs of stage people. On this point she said recently:

"While we players strive to please the public in every way I do not see why they should desire to know all the little details of our lives—matters that have little to do with a private citizen, are no affair of theirs.

Along this same line of notions I am averse to motoring. I never stopped a runaway horse, yet in a coffin race was ever seen here I by the odor of violets.

From these reasons Miss Allen has been the despair of press agents, who have been hampered in their efforts in their stern fight for the refusal of the actress to discuss the color of her leaders, favorite style in potatoes or such things.

Meltzer Pays Tribute to the New Boston Opera House

FOR SEATING ARRANGEMENTS AND PROPORTIONS OF STAGE IT IS UNEQUALED, SAYS CRITIC

In Every Way Worthy of the Great European Capitals and a Source of Sincere Congratulation to Director Russell and Mr. Jordan, the Founder—The Aggregation of Artists Superior in Importance to the Temple Which Houses It.

By Charles Henry Meltzer.

Boston, at last, the New England capital has its own opera house. A building, too, characteristic of the great town which has called it into existence. Simple, as to externals. Less simple as to its interior.

Architecturally, in its dignified severity, its coldness, and its chaste beauty, suggesting a Bostonian maiden or young matron, with a touch of the Colonial neo classicism.

To me, as to many other strangers within your gates, my first visit to the new Boston Opera House which has sprung up so magically under the fostering care of a few generous millionaires—and more especially of Mr. Eben Jordan—was a strange experience.

Used as I was to find my opera houses in the hearts of all the cities I had visited, I felt dazed and lost when, on leaving my carriage somewhere close to Huntington avenue, hoping to reach my goal quickly, I had to relish my way through ghostly fields and what, in the darkness, seemed blackberry bushes. They may, however, have been common brambles.

In London and in Rome, in Naples and Paris, the opera houses which I had so often visited stood in populous streets or broad piazzas.

But here I found a theatre, of monumental proportions and almost national significance, staring at me from vast, barren, desolate spaces.

Between the acts, as I wandered through the lobbies, I could picture to myself, in my mind's eye, Horatio, the more youthful persons in the audience adjourning, when the fancy prompted them, to these vacant fields, and filling in sweet interludes with Ring-a-Rosy

Do not think me a blasphemer, if I speak thus lightly of the rusticities connected with the big, noble and impressive Boston Opera House.

It is not my intention, I assure you, to be flippant. Quite the contrary. And, as a proof of my good faith, I will admit at once that there is nothing in New York as yet so admirably adapted, in some respects, to the purposes of [illegible], as this new temple of the arts which was thrown open just six nights ago

* * *

But—there are spots upon this sun, as on all suns. Spots which, though blemishes, may be removed, I hope.

The management and the architects of the house, be sure, are aware of them and have already begun seeking remedies.

Chiefly, the new opera house errs in the construction of the "pit" reserved for the orchestra. After listening to the music from three different places in the theatre, upstairs and down, I have convinced myself that, at present, it would be difficult for Maestro Conti and his co-operators to do justice to the more graceful and delicate styles of opera.

The material used in the making of that pit seems too solid, too unsympathetic. The music which it receives is transmitted to the audience hardly, crudely, without refinement. The brass and wood-wind instruments are particularly harsh. They drown the strings. They drown the voices. They are unmusical.

Nor, it must be confessed, does the Maestro in charge of the musicians seem quite alive to the imperfections of the readings of opera which he has thus far given us

Maestro Conti Aware of the Pit Deficiencies.

I know how conscientiously and patiently Maestro Conti has labored to please the Bostonian opera-goers. I have been told that, during the rehearsals, he had the floor of the "pit" raised and lowered scores upon scores of times in the effort to find the right compromises between the smothering and the too rude revealing of the orchestra.

And I know, as well, as anyone with sensitive ears must know, that till now he has not succeeded in attaining the desired end. Possibly the introduction of a sounding board will bring the solution of his difficulty. Something should in any case be done at once to remove a stumbling-block in the way of the more critical music-lovers who will go to the opera house.

* * *

The disposition of the seats, the comfort of the boxes, the lines of the auditorium, and, above all, the proportions of the stage, with its modern appliances and devices of all kinds required to produce artistic illusion, can not be overpraised.

Only in such theatres as the Scala, the San Carlo, the Vienna Hofoper and the Paris Opera House, could one find anything more convenient than the stage of the new Boston Opera House. It is exceptionally deep and broad, though not so high, measuring from the footlights to the summit of the proscenium arch, as it might have been.

Let me add that, while the tones which come from the orchestra seem coarse and hard, irritating, veiled and lacking in suavity, the voices on the stage are heard quite well by the audience, both in the louder and the softer passages. That is one reason to be grateful—much more than the builders of the beautiful New Theatre in New York have had to thank heaven for.

As to the auditorium, by the way, what charmed me most was the arrangement of the lower boxes, or, as they would say in Paris, the "baignoires." They are less garish and less flaunting than the parterre boxes of the Metropolitan Opera House. And just for that they seem to me more beautiful.

As to the color scheme adopted for the interior of theatre opinions will differ. To me the shade of grey [illegible] for the gold and crimson in the scheme seems rather sad. It is too cold, too drab. But even this may be symbolical and fitting. For Boston has never yet been called a flamboyant city.

Public Spirit Calls for Commendation.

The chief point to be glad for is that here, at last, after Bostonians had almost [illegible] of being blest with such a comfort, the enterprise, the public spirit, the devotion of a few citizens has raised an opera house worthy of the great European capitals. An opera house in which it will henceforth be possible for you to enj oy music in its lyrical-dramatic form with ease and dignity

* * *

Equal if not superior in importance to the creation of the Boston Opera House is the creation of the company which will interpret opera on its boards.

If the future should keep pace with what has been achieved in the past week, Mr. Henry Russell, the managing director of the organization, the man directly responsible for its merits and its demerits, may be congratulated on the result of his efforts. For that his company is a good one, strong, or so well balanced, as it will have to be in order to give satisfying performances. Has already, none the less, it contains the skeleton and much of the flesh, of an excellent company, which, in a year or two, may be able to brave comparisons with like organizations in the metropolis.

Mr. Russell, who, unlike most opera managers, is an artist as well as a man of affairs, has travelled far and to many lands in search of his singers.

From Russia he has brought back one of the most glorious baritones—George Baklanoff—we Lave ever heard. The voice of M. Baklanoff, rich, young, vibrant with emotion, full of power, is supplemented and completed by the dramatic feeling, vigor and intelligence of its owner. Then, too, this stranger has a good stage presence. The voice is not the suave, pure, charming voice of a Sammarco or A mato. It is of another quality, slightly more metallic, and yet never hard or repellant. In short, the baritone whose acquaintance we made on Monday last, in the part of Barnabe, came as a surprise and a delight to nearly all of us. And not the least of many things which I admired in him was his repose.

Two nights later, Mr. Russell quietly introduced to us another of his discoveries—the Spanish basso Mardones, who appeared as the priest Ramfis, in "Aida." A sweet, true, resonant voice, well trained, and dramatic experience, are the chief virtues of M Mardones, who will be a valuable member of the company. So may M. Nivette, another basso, be.

In the performance of "La Boheme," again, on Wednesday night, we heard for the first time here another baritone, Raymond Boulogne, who could claim a place on the boards of any, even the most famous, opera house. The part of Marcello, in which he made his debut, hardly allowed us to take the full measure of the artist. But in lyric roles he will, no doubt, be excellent.

Now for the women in the company. I would have sung with them if ever had all been as contenting as the male artists. Alas, some were much less so.

In Celestina Boninsegni the Aida of Wednesday night, Boston ing heard for the first time a singer with a pure, warm, unspoilt voice, dramatic fervor, and a most sympathetic appearance to explain her presence here. Miss Boninsegna charmed me several years ag when she appeared in the role of the enslaved Ethiopian heroine at the Metropolitan Opera House. Her audiences, however, were at the time so thoroughly under the spell of Emma Eames and Louise Nordica that they could spare no kindness for this Italian rival of their favorites. She went home in tears, fretted by her critics and furious with the treatment she had received.

[illegible] such liberties at times on Wednesday last with the phrasing of her music. Had she but sung throughout "Aida" as she did the delightful solo at the end of the first act, she would have been lifted to the stars. As it was, she gave us a great deal of pleasure.

Her comrade, Maria Claessens, the Amneris, I regret to say, did less to earn the approval of her audience. Her voice, uneven in and ill-trained contralto, was severely strained in the part of Aida's rival. Nor did the Musetta in "La Boheme," Matilda Lawiers, make so favorable an impression as we had hoped she would. Her interpretation of the familiar music in the second act was heavy and stylless, when it should properly have been frank and graceful and pursued daintily. Nevertheless may have had something to do with the defects of both these artists. Let us wait before condemning them

Lastly, in Bettina Freeman, the young American entrusted with the small but essential part of the Priestess, we heard a singer with a fine voice, lacking only in flexibility

* * *

But what of Lillian Nordica? What of [illegible] Alice Nielsen? What of Lydia Lipkowska and Anna Meitschiki, all of whom appeared during the week and were made much of?

Their names, I notice, are printed in the prospectus of the Boston Opera House as if they were part and parcel of Mr. Russell's company.

Yet, unless I have been dreaming the artists I have just mentioned are members of the Metropolitan organization, lent to the Bostonians by the New York manager ment.

For that reason I will say little of them, except that in their various parts and ways they were of invaluable assistance at the performances of the four works in the week's repertory.

It was a joy to note that Lillian Nordica had recovered much of the tonal charm and color which once beautified her voice. Louise Homer is still in her prime, still fortunate in the possession of a noble though slightly constricted contralto. Alice Nielsen has graces which nature gave her and the weaknesses of a singer, meant, perhaps, for less trying tasks than those it performs upon. Lydia Lipkowska justified the enthusiasm which she aroused in Paris, where, as I remember, I tried vainly to get a seat on the occasion when she sang Lakme and Violetta at the Opera-Comique [illegible] Sunday. As Anna Metitschki, though not, as it seemed to me, an artist of the foremost rank, has a large, [illegible] voice, which would be more pleasing if it had more sweetness.

It is but on the stars of the Metropolitan, but on the members of his regular company, that Mr. Russell will have to depend for the permanent success of the new Boston Opera House. At present there are plainly a few gaps in the organization They will be filled Give Mr. Russell time—time—time. Give Maestro Conti time. Not too much time, but well, just time enough. It is a hard and daring task they have begun. They need help and sympathy.

But also they need frank and friendly criticism.

* * *

I may be wrong Not for the world would I pretend to be infallible But, at the performances which I attended, it seemed to me that the effect attained would have been vastly more agreeable if the strings had been strengthened and if the brass and instruments of percussion had been repressed. A new grouping of the musicians might do wonders. Why not put the brass and drums under the stage? They annoyed us in the big climaxes of "La Gioconda" and "Aida." They disturbed us in many passages during the performances of "La Boheme" and "Lakme"

Works of such lyric grace as those of Puccini and Delibes need gentler treatment than Maestro Conti, I believe, will ever give them. He is an Italian of Italians, loving strong contrasts, vigor, riotous tones and color. But for "Lakme" and indeed also for "La Boheme") one needs a very careful best, with much tender sympathy to inspire it.

In Monaco and only a few months ago to me in Paris, after he had done me the great honor of playing some of his "Mimes" to me at the piano, "One should beat time as one beats women—with a caress"

Oh yes It would no doubt be easy to tell Maestro Conti that one should not beat women at all, with or without the caress which he suggests. But just now we are discussing music—not the suffrage question.

It is gratifying to perceive that, even now, the chorus of the new opera house bids fair to be quite equal to its duties. The male voices in the scene preceding the triumphal entry of Radames went very strong, indeed, on Wednesday last, yet on the whole in "La Gioconda" notably, they did not [illegible] to their chorus masters, here [illegible] Of the corps de ballet I will only say that it includes several young Americans of flower like grace, and of ers, of more usual charm, who need only time, training and persistency to become useful members of a first rate company

The splendor, beauty and dizzess of the scene-painting and costuming the cate shown in the archeological details of the productions of "Aida" and "La Gioconda," the artistic taste revealed in the avoidance of unnecessary extravagance, the good judgment which dictated the use of painted canvas in preference to more solid aids to illusion all these things must have pleased [illegible] readers and patrons of the new enterprise as much as they did [illegible] more ourselves.

As I would, I could pick holes in this or that production. I am half tempted to protest against the scene used in the second act of "La Boheme" For I once lived and lounged and dreamed in the very shadows of the Cafe Momus, which the Bohemians patronised But, after all, way need cavil at little things? M. [illegible] Nevins, heartily and earnestly, with the resources at his command. He has done much, I am sure he will do more

[illegible] the new Boston Opera House should be confidential, on first ground, and with a fairly balanced company

The real depends on you—on the Boston opera goers and on the Bostonian music critics.

It is an honor, even so, for this city to possess so fine a theatre. Whether it fills or prospers—and, though it may have many ups and downs within the next few months, I have faith in it—it will have set an example which other cities may be induced to bear great fruit

STARS TO APPEAR IN GRAND OPERA THIS WEEK

DOUBLE BILL TO BE OPERA NOVELTY THIS WEEK

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" Will Be Presented Wednesday.

MME. NORIA IN THE CAST

Bronskaja to Be Heard as Nedda in Leoncavallo's Tragic Work.

The program at the Boston Opera House next week contains but one novelty. The double bill "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci" will be given on Saturday night. Jane Noria will probably head the cast of "Cavalleria" and Eugenia Bronskaja will sing Nedda in "Pagliacci."

On Monday night "Lakme" will be repeated. Wednesday occurs the double bill. Thursday night will see "La Gioconda" with Nordica again heading the cast. "La Boheme" with Nielsen and Constantino will be repeated Friday. Saturday afternoon "Aida" will be given and Saturday night the debutante's opera will be "Lakme."

These repetitions are made necessary by the great difficulty in rehearsing operas in the limited time at the disposal of the company, but by the third week three additional operas, "Lohengrin," "Iaristia" and "Rigoletto" will probably be ready for presentation.

There will be a few changes in the cast of the week's operas, but in the main they will be given as they were. "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci" are both short operas and it has been customary to perform them together, although so full of finest and tragedy are they that they make a very strong entertainment.

Both Are Prize Operas.

"I Pagliacci" has often been given first, but Mr. Russell has decided to reverse the order and give "Cavalleria" precedence, since "I Pagliacci" works up to such a tremendous climax that it is a fitting close of the evening.

These two beautiful operas came to light as a result of a prize offered by the publisher Sonzogno in Milan for the best one act opera.

Mascagni had practically completed the two act opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" and decided to enter it for the prize. In order to comply with the conditions, he wrote the famous Intermezzo, which bridged over the chasm between the two acts and made a one act opera of it.

Leoncavallo wrote "I Pagliacci" about the time that Mascagni finished "Cavalleria." The libretto was of the most revolting, but he submitted it as it was without alteration to Sonzogno's committee. It has been asserted that "I Pagliacci" would have been given the prize if it had not violated the conditions

Mascagni's famous opera deals with a [illegible] theme. Its title, "Rustic chivalry," is suggestive. The setting is in the public square outside the church in a Sicilian village

Both Tell Strong Stories.

Santuzza, who has been wronged by Turiddu, discovers her faithless sweetheart is now infatuated with Lola, wife of Alfio. She pleads with him to return to her but he casts her off. Mamma Lucia, his mother, sympathizes with her. She is unable to know her story and send it her. Later church [illegible] leaving Santuzza kneeling on the pavement.

Alfio returns and Santuzza tells him that Turiddu is his wife's [illegible]. Alfio challenges him and Turiddu is at once arranged.

[illegible] is a tragedy. The scene of Alfio's entry is laid in Catania at the time of the Feast of the Virgin. There is a procession in the act of viewing the relics. Tonio comes forward and explains that the story is taken from real life and the composer merely expresses the sentiments of the thoroughly human characters.

The drama shows the meeting of two Regalias and several peasants to drink at the right to a travelling theatre. Villagers hail the arrival of a company of strolling players. Canio, the [illegible] and chief of the company, [illegible] the play and the performance and then [illegible] Beppo, and several peasants to the cafe tavern. Tonio the [illegible] and [illegible] Nedda, the Columbine of the troupe who [illegible] and [illegible] Nedda scorns him and strikes him with a whip. He goes off vowing vengeance.

Opera Ends in Death.

Silvio, a rich villager, however, has better luck. She agrees to leave the life of [illegible] and run away with him. A meeting is arranged for that night. Tonio has run to fetch Canio and both overhear Nedda in the [illegible] Canio grasps a knife and crying that with her lies the heart will tell her [illegible] Silvio rushes forward [illegible] and [illegible] Nedda is stabbed by Canio. The peasants listen. Canio who says "The comedy is finished."

The Pursuit of Happiness.

A Privilege for Which Our Forefathers Fought, and the Use Which Is Commonly Made of It Now That It Is Established.

BEFORE the birth of this nation a handful of hopeful, courageous men fought for seven years for the right of themselves and of their descendants to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," denied by a petty and shortsighted monarchy.

That war established the privileges our forefathers so gallantly fought for. Today every citizen of the United States may pursue happiness in his own way, unless his way happens to interfere with the rights of his fellow citizens.

The most powerful enemies of the republic have not yet succeeded in taking away from him the ballot. If an unjust government obstructs his pursuit of happiness he can change it for a just government. If organized tyranny and oppression bar his progress toward what he believes to be happiness, he can sweep them out of his way. He is still protected against public enemies, still equipped with the weapon by which, peacefully, and in a few years, he can defend the rights that his ancestors won with their muskets and by seven years of fighting.

If you explained our system of government to a Russian emigrant just escaped from a serfdom under which his life and the lives of his family were continually in peril, he would undoubtedly tell you that the rights enjoyed by the American citizen were priceless, and worth maintaining at any cost of time and energy.

Among the Russian peasantry the "pursuit of happiness" is a perquisite of the titled classes. A commoner caught indulging in it to any considerable extent would be promptly transferred to Siberia to pursue an ore cart in a dingy mine.

The work of liberation done by Washington and the soldiers of the Revolution has yet to be done in Russia. The present government guarantees nothing to its ordinary citizens but toil and oppression and terror.

If you wanted the emigrant fully to understand conditions in this country you would be obliged to tell him that the average American's definition of happiness is not the same as that of the framers of the Declaration of Independence, and that in the pursuit of happiness, as it is largely practiced to-day, the descendants of the founders of the country are strangely indifferent to the rights that were secured for them by seven years of terrible war.

Once in four years the citizens of the United States spend a month in a lather of political excitement, choosing a Chief Magistrate.

Once in four, or two, years they indulge in a turmoil over Governorships or Judgeships or Mayoralties.

Then, when the ballots have been counted, the elected candidates installed in office, the bargains made before election carried out, the citizens lose interest in their government and its workings, each returning to his or her particular method of pursuing happiness, and all, at the end of their lives, finding that happiness is even further off than the moon for which they cried when they first began to experiment with the mysteries of life.

Chasing money, the prevailing American mania, blinds men to all else.

Study the faces of the men who by overreaching their fellows by grinding and pinching and skimping and cheating, have piled up enormous fortunes. Do you find happiness written on any of those drawn, hardened countenances? Do you fancy that in a life in which the dollar sign shines above everything, there is any room for the sympathy, the kindness, the enjoyment of the world that go to make real happiness?

The desire for money is legitimate and honorable, and an evidence of good sense on the part of the man who desires it. Little can be done for one's self or for others without it.

But those who pursue it for itself alone, sacrificing self-respect and honor and manhood for the sake of adding to a hoard that can never be enjoyed save by a gold-lusting miser, are making a pretty poor use of the guarantee that came with the Constitution.

In the wild rush for dollars, and more dollars, and millions, and more millions, health is the first of man's allies to desert him. How much happiness there can be without health you can see on a visit to a hospital in the forms of the sufferers who are wheeled about in rolling chairs at health resorts and sanitariums, and in the bent and despairing form of many a man whose name is a "power" in the financial world.

In that curious race of men and women called "climbers" is another example of mistaken pursuit of happiness.

That people who can find in the world around them plenty of congenial friends, abundant congenial employments and wide opportunities for thought and study and reading should be desperately discontented until they can break into a clique of other people who do not want them seems incredible, from the point of view of common sense.

Yet few are the towns so small that they have not their aspirants for the ridiculous something called "social position," which enables them to drink tea or high balls and talk trifles with empty-headed persons, whose only claim to distinction is that they are "exclusive."

Their exclusiveness is the sort that excludes good breeding, useful employment and good taste, in most instances.

But to gain it there is worry and heartbreak in many a home, submission to snubs and insults, the sacrifice of convenience and comfort and servile cringing to inferiors—all to gain for a silly daughter or an idle son a place in a "society" which has idleness for its foundation and inanity for its goal.

Chasing madly after bubbles, the free and independent citizens of a free nation endure social and financial slavery, take the insults of every predatory power they permit to control their government, humble themselves before domineering bosses, and forget utterly that real happiness is within reaching distance, if they will but stretch out their hands and take it.

The Creator made the world for men to be happy in. He put into it beauty and plenty. In every age inspired men have shown the crowd how to see and understand its beauty, how to enjoy the abundance with which it is provided.

But age after age people have enslaved themselves until servitude became unbearable, and under the leadership of great and heroic men they have broken their bonds and established liberty and the right to enjoy happiness.

And then when liberty has been proclaimed far and wide, instead of defending and maintaining it, again we find the multitude following false ideas of happiness, pandering to petty vanities, craving great wealth, monumental power or foolish position, while the oppressors, always on the alert, quietly await another opportunity to re-establish their power and laugh at the feeble protests of the few of their victims who really think and act.

It was a splendid guarantee that the fathers of the country gave. It can easily be continued through all the centuries. But if the fortunate citizens who benefited by the Revolutionary war are to continue free to live and pursue real happiness, they must take better care of their freedom, and not, because of their indifference and selfishness, make possible any infringement of it.

The Serious Problem of the Young Man

By RT. REV. J. E. C. WELDON,
BISHOP OF MANCHESTER, ENGLAND.

THERE is no more serious problem of the day than how to deal with the young men who are emancipated from the restraints of boyhood, they have not entered upon the responsibilities of manhood; they do not realize their need of God as they will realize it in the after days, when the cares and sorrows and reverses of human nature shall gather round them like dark clouds.

The church is not wholly culpable for this apparent lack of interest of the young men in its creed and its worship. Its creed is the deep thought in the heart of humanity which it seeks to express. A change has passed upon the inner essence of society as well as upon its outward forms. At the strong evangelical feeling of a generation ago has become weaker as the habit of family prayers and of grace at meals and of religious conversation are passed away. As the observance of a Sunday has ceased as a good many parents have ceased to put the Bible with their children as the supreme law of life, and to make them an equivalent for them the example of a truly religious life.

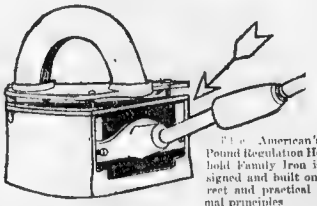
Description of Iron.



The American's 6-Pound Regulation Household Family Iron is designed and built on correct and practical thermal principles

The shape is just right. The iron proper is a simple casting, with an open chamber to receive the burner. Particular attention is called to the fact that the chamber containing the burner is open on two sides and also on the end, so that it is absolutely impossible for an explosion to occur.

There are no intricate parts to get out of order. Simply and substantially built of solid metal, the iron will last for a lifetime with ordinary use. So well made are these irons that they are practically indestructible, and the question of repairs need not be considered.

The Boston American Gas Irons are full nickel plated on a highly polished surface. Each iron is thoroughly tested before it leaves the factory and is unconditionally guaranteed to be in perfect working order when it is delivered.

A solid wooden handle is fitted to each iron. It is impossible for the handle to become hot enough to burn or scorch the hands as the heat in the iron is applied and retained just where it belongs and where it is needed; at the bottom and at the point of the iron not at the top.

With each iron we supply free a silk hose manufactured especially for us. This hose is the very best quality obtainable. Only about one half the size of regular gas hose, double dipped, odorless and guaranteed not to leak

Samples of the Gas Irons and Many Other Premiums, which cannot be described for lack of space, are on exhibition in the following places, GO AND SEE THEM FOR YOURSELF:

The Tomb of Aaron Found on Mount Hor?

THE STONE COFFIN IN THE MOUNT HOR TOMB.

Worshipping the Brazen Serpent in the Wilderness Near Mount Hor.—By F. A. Bruni.

After the burial of Aaron, the High Priest, on Mount Hor, the Children of Israel rebelled against the Lord and were punished with a plague of venomous serpents. But repenting their wickedness, the Lord directed Moses to erect a "fiery serpent," and those who reverently gazed upon it were healed of their agonies.

WHAT is said by the Arabs to be the tomb of Aaron, High Priest of Israel during the Exodus, and brother to Moses, has, perhaps, been found on Mount Hor, in Arabia Petraea, part of the Wilderness crossed by the tribes after their deliverance from Egypt.

This Evening Wrap is of Black Embroidered Net, Heavily Lined and Interlined With Silk. The Sleeves and Front Are Defined by Bands of Skunk Fur and Long Loops of Broad Velvet Ribbon Add Richness to the Cloak.

Draped Mantle of Brown Liberty Satin, Trimmed With Embroidered Panels and Bands, and the Sleeves Finished With Heavy Silk Tassels. Liberty Revers Finish the Front and There Is a Collar of Long Tufted Zibelline.

A Luxurious Coat of Ermine Trimmed With Bands, Cuffs and Long Stole of White Fox.

Not a few notable gowns of the season there is shown on this page. It is a draped mantle of one of the fashionable shades of brown, with an underdress of yellow—mustard. It is of Liberty satin, to be obtained only at [illegible]. The wide sleeves are finished with wide embroidery of a conventional design and a deeper shade, and finished with heavy silk tassels. The front is finished with Liberty satin revers. The wrap is slashed at the hem to give a panel effect in front. The ends of these panels are trimmed with the same embroidery. As a note of contrast, there is a collar of long tufted zibeline.

An evening wrap of black embroidered net, heavily lined and interlined with silk, is one of the most elaborate of a most elaborate season. The front of the wrap is finished with a border of skunk fur. From the shoulders hang broad flat loops of black velvet ribbon.

Those fashionable persons who can afford to have evening wraps, to be truly fashionable, should have one to match each costume. The note of richness is in the [illegible] and there is a touch of fur [illegible]

LIKE THE FAMOUS "FLORODORA SEXTETTE"

Hello, people; people, hello!
They are a lively lot of girls,
These girls from London town.
Each one was dressed just like the rest,
In just a simple little gown.

They didn't mind much where they went,
Yet each was bent and quite intent
On dreaming of this little text:
Where shall we go to next?
—"Hello, People," from "Havana."

Tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?
There are a few, kind sir, but simple [illegible]
If I loved you, would it be a silly thing to do?
For I must love some one, and it might as well be you "Tell Me, Pretty Maiden," in "Florodora."

IT is in the atmosphere—you can't escape it; the "Original Octette" has the "Original Sextette" beaten to a frazzle.

The "Tell me, pretty maidens," of "Florodora" were mere pioneers along the path of luxury, preferred steel stock and rich husband which, for the "Hello people, people hello," girls of "Havana" is paved with precious stones and more than possible coronets.

The London musical comedy success, "Havana," of which "Jimmy" Powers is the star in this country, relieves Erminie Clark, whose one word "yes," so they all say, will make her Duchess of Leicester. Among the Florodora maidens the most spectacular winner was Margaret Walker, with a steel trip which netted her a fortune—as they all said—of $750,000.

At least three other "pretty maidens" married millionaires, but it takes an "Octette" girl—Edith Kelly—to capture a member of the Gould family, as all the newspapers had it. And so go the "Florodora companions" all along the line.

In the "Octette" the virus is all detectable feminine no poor stalks of masculinity to put a wire edge on the picture, as in the case of the "Sextette." Sitting anywhere front of the fifth row you are lost—you are simply overwhelmed by that aggregate of charms. It seems a wonder that any detached millionaire pedestrian or titled, can concentrate on any individual. He would be reckonable in making his proposal to the whole bunch.

Ever since it was cabled from Europe that Edith Kelly, the leader of the "Havana" octette, can become Mrs. Frank Gould any time she says the word, other instances of signal personal triumph in that bunch of beauty have kept cropping out.

The fact is that the octette of the "Havana" production bids fair to achieve even a greater measure of fame and fortune than befell that lucky "Florodora" sextet—and every one ought to remember how rich these six pretty maidens struck it.

"Striking it rich"—that is precisely what is happening in the case of the "Havana" girls, who sing that "Hello, People," song, and who have been asking very pointedly, "Where shall we go to next?"

It looks very much as if Edith Kelly, the leader, will "go to" Frank Gould.

She is an English girl, nineteen years old and stunning. Young as she is, this is not the first affair of the heart in which she has figured. When she was only sixteen she became engaged to an English millionaire gunpowder manufacturer, but the affair lapsed somehow.

Then Edith went on the stage and began breaking more hearts in a week than she earned pounds in a month. The voice of dewiny whispered in her ear, "Go West, sweet maid, Go West," and she went as far west as Broadway and Thirty-fourth street, where she appeared as the leader of the "octette." Her beauty was landed along the Great White Way, and soon came to the ears of Frank Gould, whose divorce had left him again detached. He came, and saw, and was conquered. Nearly every night thereafter he was to be found in the front row, and when no chanced to meet the sparkling Edith she was amiable as charming.

This Summer when Miss Kelly visited London, Frank Gould was not very far away. In fact, they were soon so much together that a report came from the exclusive Savoy Hotel that "Frank Gould and wife" had left that hotel for Paris. Of course, it was all a mistake, based upon the fact that Frank Gould has a sister, who is the Princess de Sagan, and now sojourning in Paris, and as he wanted to pay her a visit, he had to cross the Channel.

It subsequent at Edith Kelly simply had to do some shopping in Paris at this time, and purely by coincidence they crossed the Channel in the same vessel. They were just companions du voyage—that's all.

But people with long memories who recall that Frank Gould was smitten with the charms of Miss Kelly the Florodora so irresistibly that he married her on a Sunday within twenty-four hours after he was accepted, would not be at all surprised if Miss Kelly the second should figure in a marriage similarly precipitate.

Then there was Edna Croxton, who is the daughter of Edward M. Stock, the millionaire coal dealer. When Edna was sixteen—she's only nineteen now—she eloped with Warren W. Croxton, a well-known railway man, but she repented and went on the stage. She had the stage-fever so bad that her younger sister, Helen, caught it, and both of them set out for New York, with an irate father in close pursuit.

Both of the parents had originally been opposed to the stage aspiration of their daughters, but the mother had ultimately acquiesced. Little Helen had just been initiated into all the glories of her first make-up when her determined father appeared breathlessly behind the scenes and forbade her to go on. Mr. Stock was a big man, and Helen, though determined, was very slight. Helen did not go on, but Edna was considered more worldly, and was allowed to proceed with her part. And she sang that "Where shall we go to next?" so prettily that a well-known wealthy New York broker lost no opportunity to cultivate her acquaintance. His attentions were very persistent, and though it is at present a dark secret, the fact is that next week Edna will get her divorce and her marriage to the broker will be immediately announced.

With Irene Hawley, the fair Brooklyn girl, the similarity between the "Florodora sextet and Havana octette is [illegible] advanced one step farther.

Miss Hawley has recently been chosen by Harrison Fisher as having the model face and form that will be the best inspiration hereafter. She is the new "Harrison Fisher girl."

In the "Florodora" sextet at one time was Ivest Gleed, who gave Charles Dana Gibson the inspiration and furnished the type for his sweet-faced divorcée widow." Jessa Closson afterward became engaged to the Marquis di Rudini, son of a former Italian Prime Minister, but the engagement was broken off.

A good many of the girls who at one time or another appeared in the famous sextet of "Florodora" subsequently became famous as leading ladies, and the "Havana" octette seems to be just as auspicious a nursery for budding Modjeskas and Bernhardts.

Against Daisy Green, of the effete "Florodora" collection, there is Carolyn Green, who is [illegible] a wife. She married a rich gold miner, and found his wife on a New York stage. The [illegible] now with her husband, but he kept his wife while [illegible] same means as [illegible]

Cecile Mayo, [illegible] and [illegible] Lamb's Club good [illegible] the stage is good enough [illegible] and they have made it [illegible]

Marie Wilson, Married Frederick Gebhard.

Edwards Land is millionaire of Malden, Mass., has [illegible] to [illegible] her, to put [illegible] [illegible] make [illegible] lady of leisure, with automobiles and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PRIZE WINNERS IN THE HAT AND DRESS TRIMMING CONTEST

ON this page to-day are printed the names of the winners of the more important prizes in the remarkably popular series of Hat and Dress-Trimming Contests which for four Sundays appeared in the Magazine Section of this newspaper.

The very large and attractive array of prizes offered combined with the fascination of the contest itself to arouse the best efforts of more women than ever entered a competition of this kind. The gowns and hats submitted which did not show conspicuous good taste and skill were the exceptions. Many of them were indeed works of art, mounted on heavy cardboard with backgrounds daintily tinted in watercolors to harmonize with the color schemes of the hats and dresses. It was only after carefully considering the merits of thousands of creations, charming and stylish enough to make a Parisian designer envious, that the Board of Judges was able to make the awards.

The various prizes were selected with especial thought for feminine taste, and many of them represent the newest things on the market this season.

On account of the great popularity of "Klosfit" petticoats this newspaper feels that no more attractive prizes could have been selected. The fortunate winners of these splendid garments will find them unexcelled for style, durability and perfect fit. They represent the last word in the production of high-class ready-to-wear apparel, and are nothing less than a necessity to the woman who desires a stylish figure or who wishes to be well gowned.

"Klosfit" petticoats fit the waist and hips as though moulded to the form. They are always even, smooth and regular, with no sign of puckers and no hint of wrinkles or bunches. Conforming perfectly to the figure, they hang in those long, shapely, unbroken lines at present so much admired.

The absolutely smooth and comfortable fit of "Klosfit" garments is due to the fact that they are made with an elastic mesh jersey gusset over each hip and with a firm, strong elastic waistband. Another point of superiority which discriminating women will be quick to notice is the placket. This is fitted with glove clasps, so that it is sure to fasten smoothly and securely.

You will find the "Klosfit" always ready to wear without altering, and you will agree that never before have petticoats been given such graceful, clinging lines.

Of no less merit are the other prizes. The phonograph is one of the best talking machines on the market. As for the "Allwon" Manicure Buffers, the "Thermos" Bottles, the "Chic" Patterns, the "Pixo" Powder Puffs, the "Lustrine" Nail Enamel, the "Lastshape" Belts and Quentin's Beauty Powder Leaves—each of these is the recognized standard of its class, and will be found a delightful reward for the time and effort given to this series of contests.

The prizes are being packed and shipped to the prize winners as speedily as possible. The space on this page makes it impossible to print the names of the winners of the one thousand "Moll 'Lee" songs, which is one of the newest and best of Theodore Morse's successful songs.

No. 46 — "Before Going to Bed"

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the most Famous Living Beauty.

TODAY Mme. Lina Cavalieri takes up an exceedingly important topic. Many young women who think they are extremely careful of their bodies and faces wonder why their complexions are "muddy" and spoiled with dirt, but it is coarseness and dirt-eyes are dull. Mme. Cavalieri, in collaboration with the Editor, explains in detail this process, "Before Going to Bed."

Mme. Cavalieri says that while the day toilet may be perfunctory, the night toilet must be thorough. She cites the evil results of retiring without thoroughly cleansing the face from the grime and dust of the day, leaving the pores to perform the work well. She says that the night is the time for thorough cleansing of the flesh and gives a certain reason. "Never retire without bathing your face," she insists. "The human face tells its own story of the day's catch of dirt. Just examine it."

She shows the need of water drinking at night of packing the lungs with fresh air by removing from the room all intruding dust before retiring.

Next week Mme. Cavalieri will write for her eight hundred thousand readers on "The Care of the Hands."

The Invisible Wound—By Maurice Jokai

Translated from the Hungarian by Eugene Lucas.

DR. JOHN CESPEDALY (name physician and surgeon, one morning, at a very early hour, was forced to receive a very urgent caller. The man, who was waiting in the antechamber, had sent in word by the valet that delay would be very dangerous, that he was in need of immediate assistance.

The surgeon dressed quickly and admitted the man. He was a stranger. Judging from his appearance and manner he seemed to belong to the highest society. On his pale face physical and mental suffering could be seen; his right hand was bound in a black silk kerchief, which was tied around his neck. Although he had some control over his facial lines, he could not restrain an occasional moan of pain.

"I am, sir."

"You will pardon me for not knowing you personally. I do not live in the city. I come from the country, and know you only by your fame. I cannot say that I am glad to know you, for there is nothing pleasant for me in this acquaintance."

The surgeon noticed that the visitor was too weak to stand, and therefore showed him a seat on his couch.

"I am tired, the man groaned; it is a week now since I have slept; something is the matter with my right hand. I don't know what it may be; perhaps a carbuncle, or possibly a cancer. First it ached, and later on it started to burn continuously.

The stranger marked with a pencil a small circle about the size of a penny. The surgeon looked at it. He began to believe that this man had some mad, imaginary sickness.

"You stay here with me in my house; in a few days I will help you."

"I can't wait. Don't think, sir, that I am crazy. The place which I marked with the pencil pains me terribly, and I came to you to have it cut out."

"But I won't do it," said the surgeon.

"Why not?"

"Because your hand is all right. I can see a wound on your hand any more than I can see one on mine."

"Why, you really seem to believe that I am crazy, or that I am joking," said the man. And he took out of his pocket a thousand florin bill and put it down on the surgeon's desk.

"Here—you can see now that I am not a child and that the services I want of you are pretty important to me. I beg you to cut this place out of my hand."

"And I tell you, sir, that were you to give me all the money in the world you could not induce me to see a healthy body sick and to cut into it with a knife."

"Why not?"

"Because it would destroy my professional credit. The whole world would say that you were an idiot and that I was willing enough to turn that fact into profit to myself—or that I was too ignorant to notice that you were crazy."

"Well, then, I shall find another who will be willing to perform this operation myself. My left hand is a little bit awkward, but it makes no difference. You only make two bandages after I have finished the operation."

The surgeon perceived with astonishment that the stranger really took the matter seriously. He took off his coat, rolled up his shirt sleeves and took his pocket-knife in his left hand. One minute, and the knife made a cut into the skin.

"Stop!" exclaimed the surgeon, who became alarmed lest the sufferer, in his awkwardness, should injure an artery.

"It was really considerate of the operation to go so far. Now I will get on.

The stranger took an operating knife and lay the man's quivering hand to his palm, requesting him to turn his face aside.

"It affects most people very much," he said, "to look into their own blood."

"It is not necessary. I will rather show you how I can cut without the slightest pain."

And he witnessed the whole operation with perfect composure. He himself suggested how deep the cut should go. His open palm did not even move in the surgeon's hand, and when the round spot was cut out he sighed as if relieved—as if made well and sound.

"Nothing burns you any more?" asked the surgeon.

"All the pain has ceased" said the stranger, smiling. "The terrible pain is done away with. The slight pain caused by the bleeding seems to me, compared with the former pain, as a cooling breeze after scorching heat. It makes me feel well, indeed, to see my blood thus pouring out. Just let it run. It makes me feel very, very well."

While the bandage was being put on the stranger's face was entirely changed. A quiet, good-natured face now smiled on the surgeon. A returned liking for life was to be seen on his countenance. Instead of the former harsh, wild lines. His forehead was smooth, the color in his face had returned. He pressed the surgeon's hand heartily, and, in a cheerful voice, said to him:

"Please accept my sincerest thanks for what you have done for me. The slight reciprocation I can offer you is not at all in proportion with the service rendered."

But the surgeon's opinion was just the contrary. He did not want to accept the thousand florins which the stranger had put on his desk. So the stranger suggested that he give the money to some hospital and then he left.

The surgeon visited the stranger at his hotel, where he remained until his wound healed. During this time he had the opportunity to convince himself that he was dealing with a clever man of high culture, a man of distinguished position. There was no trace to be found in him of any mental or physical ailment after the invisible wound had been operated on. When the wound had healed the man went home to his country place.

"I saw the coffin's cover rise slowly and the body within sitting up noiselessly."

About three weeks passed, when, one morning, again at an unusually early hour, the surgeon's valet announced the same strange man.

The stranger was shown in. His hand was bandaged as before and his countenance was so distorted from the pains he suffered that he could hardly be recognized. When he dropped down into a chair he had no control over himself, he moaned and reached his hand silently to the surgeon.

"What has happened?"

"We did not cut it out deep enough last time," said the sufferer in a hollow voice. "The pain has returned, it burns more cruelly than ever. My arm is stiffened from the pains. I did not want to trouble you again, I suffered and hoped that little by little the wound would spread till it reached the heart and put an end to this miserable life. But this does not happen. The pain does not spread beyond this little round place. The pain is unspeakable! Look at my face and you will perceive it."

The surgeon opened the bandage. The place that had been operated on was healed—a healthy new skin covered it. On the whole hand not an artery seemed to be restless, the pulse of the arm beat quietly, without any fever, while his every muscle quivered.

"It's wonderful! This case transcends all former experiences," said the surgeon in astonishment.

It is a torturing wonder doctor! Do not search, do not investigate its cause, but relieve me of this suffering, take your instruments and cut the wound more deeply, that is my only chance."

The surgeon felt that he had no choice. He drew the second time, letting the knife go deeper. Again he noticed those signs of relief on the patient's face, and the rapturous pleasure when he saw his blood streaming abundantly. And when the surgeon again bandaged the hand the death-like pallor disappeared from the man's face, the lively color returning. But this time the smile was absent. The man thanked the surgeon in sad tones.

"Thanks, doctor. All is past now. Within a few days my wound will be healed. However, don't be amazed if you see me again in a month from now."

"Why in the devil do I have to cut out of your head."

"I am certain that within a month the burning pain will return," said the stranger in a dejected manner. "But—well, let it come! I am in the hands of fate. Farewell!"

The surgeon told his fellow physicians about this mysterious ailment, but all had different opinions without being able to arrive at any real conclusion.

The month passed and the mysterious guest could recognize everything in what a man is, the age of death—he can find pleasure. A young girl married. It was a love match. I married a beautiful, well-educated and good hearted girl, who was a governess at a neighboring countess's house. The penniless girl, not only from gratitude that I had made of her a lady, but with real dispassionate love, clung to me for life.

Half a year thus passed by and we were perfectly happy. If I had to leave my estate for the city for a time she was restless during my absence. Very often she would walk a mile to meet me on the way, she would wait for me, and, if I was late, she would not retire all night. When, after much urging from the countess, she would be persuaded to make her a visit, she would return on the same day, not being able to stay away from me more than a few hours.

"Her affection for me went so far that she gave up dancing, so that she would not have to hold any man's hand but mine, and she cried if some young man paid compliments to her. In other words, I had a good, innocent child for a wife, who had no other thought but of me.

"I don't know what kind of a demon a war that whispered into my ear. 'Maybe life is all make-believe.' Man is so foolish that he must look for anguish even when most happy.

My wife had a small sewing table, whose drawer she always kept locked. I noticed that several times. She never left the key in the key-hole, and neither did she ever leave the drawer open.

"This began to worry me. What was there that she should conceal it so from me? I was crazy. I no longer believed in her innocent face, her clear eyes, in her coherent and kind words.

"One day the countess came and induced my wife to spend the day with her. Our estates were a few hours distant from each other, and I promised my wife that I would go, too, shortly after her.

"So specific had the coach rumbled out of my court when I got hold of all the keys in the house and tried with them, one after another, the little lock of the drawer—finally one opened it.

"I was startled when it opened. I was a thief, a lock-breaking thief, who came to rob the secrets of an unprotected woman. My hands trembled while, one by one, I took out the objects in the drawer. All at once, underneath some laces, I found a bundle of letters that could be recognized at first sight! Love-letters!

"The bundle was bound with a silver-edged silk ribbon. When I tore at the ribbon it came to my mind that these letters might contain secrets that belonged to my wife's girlhood. In vain, I asked myself, responsible to me for thoughts which arose at the time when she was not yet mine? Very likely she, too, had her fancies before she knew me. Would that be a sin? Who could accuse her of sinning? But still I was ready to accuse her. I tore off the ribbon. I opened one letter after another and read them through.

"What was in the letters? The meanest treachery that was ever attempted against a man. An intimate friend of mine had written them, and in what language, with what an authorized passion and love! Now he wrote in them about concealment, about stupid husbands, how he gave advice as to what a woman had to do in order to deceive her husband! And all these letters bore the mark of our marriage!

"How can I describe my feelings? My state was like an intoxication with a mortal potion. And I had drank that potion to its last drop. I read all the letters. Then I folded them in an orderly manner, tied them with the ribbon, covered them with the lace and locked the drawer.

"I was aware of the fact that in case I failed to tell for my wife until noon, in the evening she would come alone from the countess's. So it was. She jumped off the coach hurriedly; she ran swiftly toward me; she embraced and kissed me, and she was so happy to be with me again!

"I did not let anything betray me. We chatted, had supper, and then retired to our respective rooms. I did not close my eyes; wide awake, I counted the passing hours. When the first quarter after twelve struck I got up and went across to her room.

"Her blond, beautiful head lay on the white pillows like an angel's painted among white clouds. What a lie of nature to give such an innocent countenance to a sinful woman! I was obstinately determined, like a madman in his fixed delusion. The poison was working in my soul. I slowly put my right hand on her white neck, and all at once pressed it closely. She for a minute opened her big, dark blue eyes and looked at me, and then she slowly closed them again and died.

"She died without defending herself against me. Not even was she angry with me when I killed her.

"A single drop of blood came out of her mouth falling on the back of my hand—you know the spot well. And even this I noticed only the next morning, when it had dried.

"We buried her without much notice. We lived on the plains—no official inquiry disturbed me. She had no relations, no protectors to make inquiries about her. No death notices were sent out, so there were none of my friends at the funeral.

"When I came back from the vault I did not feel the remotest burden in my heart. I was cruel to her, but she deserved it. I did not loathe her, but I could forget her if did not think of her. I think a man has never committed a murder with less conscience than I did.

When I returned to my castle the countess was there. She was visibly touched when she saw me. The horror, the sorrow, the grief, or I don't know what, mixed her utterance together, so that I could hardly understand what she said to me. I did not listen to her, anyway. I did not want to be consoled. I was not sad. But finally she grasped my hand and said that she was compelled to leave a secret to my discretion.

She presumed that, as a gentleman, I would not abuse it.

She said she had intrusted a bundle of letters to my late wife, the nature of which did not permit their being kept at home. She wanted the letters back now, she said. I felt a cold shudder run through me. With seeming coldness, I asked her about the contents of those letters. The countess sneered at this, and thus answered:

"Sir, your wife was much more generous than you are; for, when she accepted the care of my documents, she did not ask me about their contents. Nay, she gave her word of honor that she would not look into them. And I am certain that she never did, for she was a noble soul, who would be ashamed to break her word of honor.

"Very well," I said, 'how can I recognize the package?'

He tied with a silver-edged ribbon.'

I am going to search for it,' I told her.

Then I took my late wife's keys and started to look for the package of which I knew so well. I made a long search, finally opening again the little drawer.

"Is that it?' said I, handing the bundle to the countess.

"Oh, yes, yes! You see, they are tied just as I tied them—your brave wife never opened the package!'

"I did not dare to raise my eyes to her. I was afraid she would see that I had opened the bundle. I said good-by and excused myself in order to be alone. The countess jumped into her coach and drove home.

"She was right. The poor soul had a debauched husband. If I were such a man I would have deserved, too, that my wife should be the same. But, alas! my wife was an angel, an angel who loved her husband even when he murdered her.

"I don't remember what I did in the first hours. I only know that when I came to my senses I was down at the vault before the coffin that contained my murdered wife. It was cold and dark, and I wanted to awake her, but I began to speak to her.

"As truly as you loved me sometimes, as truly as you loved me at your death even, grant me the mercy of vengeance in this life. Do not postpone my punishment to the other world. Make me suffer; torture me, kill me. I do not let the vengeance wait until after my death!'

"With such ravings I spoke to the silent dead, and all at once a dream, or a fainting spell, oppressed me. I saw the coffin's cover rise slowly and the body within sitting up noiselessly. I lay stiffly before the bier, placing my hand at the edge of the coffin, and thus laid my head on it. The lips of the dead were pale, but a red drop of blood was there still. She slowly bent toward me, opened her eyes like she did for the last time, and kissed my hand; but the drop of blood remained on her lips.

"Then she again closed her eyes, lay back on her cold pillow, and the coffin's cover was shut once again.

"Shortly afterward a fierce pain awoke me from my unconscious state. I hurriedly went up into the fresh air. It was early in the morning and nobody noticed me. There was no blood on my hand, yet it burned there like fire.

"This pain grew hour by hour and never ceased. Night and day I suffered with full consciousness of the pain. I never complained to anybody; no one would have believed me.

"You witnessed how much I had to suffer, how relieved my horrible pain became after each operation. But as soon as the place healed up the pain was renewed. It is now the third time, and I have not the strength to fight against it. I will die in an hour. I shall die.
